

CONTENTS

I. Introduction. The methodical-methodological ambivalence of Analytical Philosophy of Language pervading the three phases of its historical development	1
II. The origin of this ambivalence in Wittgenstein's Tractatus	4
III. Its consequences for the methodology of science of Logical Positivism	14
IV. The resolution of the ambivalence in the third phase in favor of a "methodological intersubjectivism" – and the remaining problem of a dialectical mediation between intersubjective 'understanding' and objective 'explanation'	35
Selected Bibliography	58
Index of Names	62