

Contents

	List of Illustrations	xi
	Acknowledgments	xiii
	Introduction
	Kathleen LeBesco and Peter Naccarato	1
CHAPTER 1	Men and Menus: Dickens and the Rise of the “Ordinary” English Gentleman
	Annette Cozzi	13
CHAPTER 2	“Food Will Win the War”: Food and Social Control in World War I Propaganda
	Celia M. Kingsbury	37
CHAPTER 3	Cooking In Memory’s Kitchen : Re-Presenting Recipes, Remembering the Holocaust
	Marie I. Drews	53
CHAPTER 4	“More than one million mothers know it’s the REAL thing”: The Rosenbergs, Jell-O, Old-Fashioned Gefilte Fish, and 1950s America
	Nathan Abrams	79
CHAPTER 5	Cooking the Books: Jewish Cuisine and the Commodification of Difference
	Eric Mason	105

CHAPTER 6	Typisch Deutsch: Culinary Tourism and the Presentation of German Food in English-Language Travel Guides Lynne Fallwell	127
CHAPTER 7	The Embodied Rhetoric of "Health" from Farm Fields to Salad Bowls Jean P. Retzinger	149
CHAPTER 8	Consuming the Other: Packaged Representations of Foreignness in President's Choice Charlene Elliott	179
CHAPTER 9	From Romance to PMS: Images of Women and Chocolate in Twentieth-Century America Kathleen Banks Nutter	199
CHAPTER 10	Julia Child, Martha Stewart, and the Rise of Culinary Capital Kathleen LeBesco and Peter Naccarato	223
	Contributors	239
	Index	243