

CONTENTS

Preface . . . . .	Page IX
-------------------	------------

Part One

RESEARCH PROBLEMS OF SEMANTICS

Chapter One. Linguistics . . . . .	3
Chapter Two. Logic . . . . .	22
Chapter Three. Semantic Philosophy . . . . .	53
1. The alleged "turning point" in philosophy. Language as the only subject matter of research . . . . .	59
2. Language as a product of arbitrary convention . . . . .	76
Chapter Four. General Semantics . . . . .	90

Part Two

SELECTED PROBLEMS OF SEMANTICS

Chapter One. The Philosophical Aspect of the Communication Process . . . . .	113
1. The essence of the problem of communication . . . . .	118
2. The controversy between the transcendentalist and the naturalist conception . . . . .	130
3. Foundations of a Marxist formulation of the problem . . . . .	140
Chapter Two. The Sign: Analysis and Typology . . . . .	155
1. The communication process as the starting point in the analysis of the sign . . . . .	155
2. Husserl's tentative typology of signs . . . . .	162
3. Definition of the sign . . . . .	173
4. General foundations of the typology of signs . . . . .	176
A. Signals . . . . .	181
B. Substitutive signs . . . . .	185
5. The specific nature of verbal signs . . . . .	194

Chapter Three. The Meanings of "Meaning" . . . . .	212
1. On the sign-situation . . . . .	215
2. Meaning as a real or ideal object . . . . .	228
A. "Meaning" as the object denoted . . . . .	228
B. The conception of intentional meanings . . . . .	230
3. Meaning as a relation (1) . . . . .	247
4. Meaning as a relation (2) . . . . .	263
A. Meaning as a relation between men who communicate with one another . . . . .	264
B. The origin of meaning . . . . .	268
C. Meaning and notion . . . . .	274
D. The mechanism of the links between sign and meaning . . . . .	295
5. The linguistic approach to the issue of meaning . . . . .	301
Chapter Four. The Communicative Function of Language . . . . .	311
1. Language and "languages" . . . . .	312
2. Language and reality . . . . .	321
3. Language and effective communication . . . . .	352
Bibliography . . . . .	366
Index of Names . . . . .	391