

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	xi
American Hypermasculinities	xi
Ironic Failed Heroism	xv
Aesthetics as Critique	xix
Notes	xxii
1 An Ironic Contention: The Heroic Failure of the Kid in Blood Meridian
Meridian	1
The Origins of American Frontier Hypermasculinities	3
Hypermasculinities on the Frontier	4
The Judge as Narrative Force	10
Images of Dead Children	11
Christian Imagery	12
The Kid as Ironic Hero	14
Notes	18
2 A Hero by Default: John Grady Cole as Hypermasculine Heroic Failure in All the Pretty Horses
Failure in All the Pretty Horses	25
Blood Meridian and All the Pretty Horses	26
Cowboy Hypermasculinities	28
The Tenuousness of Identities Based on Myth	29
An America with No Room for a Cowboy	35
Mexican Context	38
Homosexuality	42
Failed Heroism	46
Notes	49

3	Black Masculinities and Cultural Incest in Song of Solomon	55
	American Context	57
	Blackness as an Invention of Whites	60
	Black Masculinities	61
	Aesthetics: Flight toward Orality	66
	Pilate as Failed Hero	70
	The Trafficking of Women and the Incest Taboo	71
	A Politics of Failure	77
	Notes	81
4	Staggerlee in the Closet: Rufus Scott as Failed Ironic Hero in Another Country	87
	Morrison, Baldwin, and Family	88
	Staggerlee as Hypermasculine Folkloric Referent	89
	Politics of Failure	96
	American Context: Baldwin, Cleaver, and Mailer	98
	Closeted Sexualities	103
	Blackness Defined by Whites	105
	Sex, Race, and Heroic Failure	107
	Notes	112
	Conclusion: Masculinity as Hypermasculine Failure	117
	Notes	121
	References Cited	123
	Index	129
	About the Author	133