Contents

List of figures page x
List of tables xii
Acknowledgements xiv

1 Introduction 1
What is professional discourse? 2
Social constructionism and social practice 4
Discourse, socialization and identity 5
Indexicality, reflexivity and performativity 8
Some characteristics of professional discourse 9
Why does professional discourse vary from situation to situation and across domains? 20
Who is the intended audience of this book? 26
How is the book organized? 26

Part I Conceptual issues

2 Profession as a symbolic community: the different dimensions of professional discourse 35
Discourse communities 37
Profession's struggle for hegemony 38
Shared functions instead of shared goals 44
Community as defined by activities instead of language conventions 46
Role of knowledge in professions 47
Conclusion 50

Part II Linguistic realizations

3 Ideology in professional discourse 55
What is ideology, and what are its functions in professional discourse? 56
Cognitive dimensions of ideology 56
Social dimensions of ideology 58
Representational dimensions of ideology 60
Realizations of ideologies in professional discourse 62
Participants 62
Inclusion versus exclusion 62

Pronoun versus noun 63
Passivization 64
Personalization versus impersonalization 64
Categorization 65
Nominalization 65
Attributed versus non-attributed 65
Participants: a case study 66
Circumstantial adjuncts 74
Circumstantial adjuncts: a case study 76
Process analysis 79
Action processes 80
Mental processes 80
Relational processes 81
Verbal processes 82
Process analysis: a case study 83
Conclusion 88

4 Communicative competence in the professional workplace: an identity-based perspective 91
Introduction 91
What is communicative competence? 93
What does communication in the contemporary workplace involve? 97
The relationship between language and identity 100
Identity roles and identity virtues 103
How can identity roles be analysed in professional discourse? 106
Lawyer's letter of advice 113
Conclusion 118

5 A model of interpersonal negotiation in professional discourse 123
Transactional versus interactional functions of discourse: a false dichotomy 123
Problems with the current models of interpersonal negotiation 124
Stances and professional identity 130
A model of linguistic indexicals in interpersonal negotiation 134
Confrontational discourse in academia 136
Conclusion 143

Part III Functions and global patterns

6 Speech functions 149
Words and meanings: what is pragmatics? 149
Speech act theory 150
The co-operative principle 152
Applications of speech act theory to professional discourse research 154
Directives 155
Representatives 157
Expressives 158
Commissives 159
Declarations 160
Applications of the co-operative principle to professional discourse research 161
Conclusion 164

7 Intertextuality 167
Types of professional communication 168
Recontextualization and intertextuality 169
How can intertextuality be studied? A proposed model 171
Recontextualization of academic voices in institutional discourse 173
Recontextualization of institutional voices in academic discourse 176
Recontextualization of business voices in institutional discourse 178
Conclusion 179

8 Genre and text patterning 185
What is a genre? 185
How can genres be classified? 192
A more dynamic model proposed 193
Promotional genre 202
Case study: business proposal versus welfare funding proposal 205
Regulatory genre 211
Case study: legal terms and conditions in a bank product application 214
Negotiation genre 219
Case study: negotiation genre in business and office settings 224
Reporting genre 226
Case study: fund manager's report 231
Conclusion 237

9 Multimodality 242
Introduction 242
Word–image connections 244
The proposed taxonomy 247
Logico-semantic relations 247
Symmetry/asymmetry of relations 249
Spatial arrangement of relations 251
Meta-functions of relations 255
Evaluative nature of relations 257
Metaphorical nature of relations 259
An example of analysis 263
Logico-semantic relations and their hierarchical representation and meta-functional distribution 263
Spatial arrangement and evaluative and metaphorical functions 266
Conclusion 268

10 Conclusion 273
Developments in professional discourse studies 274
Future changes in professional discourse 278

Author index 283
Subject index 287