

CONTENTS

Series Editor's Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: Mapping Narratives Robert T. Tally Jr.	1
1 What Lies Between?: Thinking Through Medieval Narrative Spatiality Robert Allen Rouse	13
2 Plotting One's Position in Don Quijote : Literature and the Process of Cognitive Mapping Jeanette E. Goddard	31
3 "Eyes That Have Dwelt on the Past": Reading the Landscape of Memory in The Mill on the Floss Alice Tsay	47
4 Mapping Hardy and Brontë Susan E. Cook	61
5 "She Sought a Spiritual Heir": Cosmopolitanism and the Pre-Suburban in Howards End Heather McNaugher	75
6 The Space of Russia in Joseph Conrad's Under Western Eyes John G. Peters	89
7 "History, Mystery, Leisure, Pleasure": Evelyn Waugh, Bruno Latour, and the Ocean Liner Shawna Ross	111
8 To the South England, to the West Eternity: Mapping Boundlessness in Modern Scottish Fiction Jenny Pyke	127

9	Leaving the Landscape: Mapping Elsewhereness in Canadian City Literature Myles Chilton	145
10	Mapping Tokyo's "Empty Center" in Oyama's A Man with No Talents Barbara E. Thornbury	167
11	Mapping the Personal in Contemporary German Literature Anne B. Wallen	181
12	Charting the Extraordinary: Sentient and Transontological Spaces Rhona Trauvitch	199
13	On and Off the Map: Literary Narrative as Critique of Cartographic Reason Derek Schilling	215
	Notes on Contributors	229
	Index	233