

CONTENTS

Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
List of Illustrations	x
INTRODUCTION A REPUBLIC OF TASTE	I
Introductory: the scope of the book 1. The discourse of civic humanism 3. The civic humanist theory of painting 10. The qualification for citizenship in the republic of taste 13. Painting and public virtue 18. The rhetorical aesthetic 23. The Judgment of Hercules 27. Liberty and luxury: the history of painting 33. Theories of painting in France 39. The 'privatisation' of society and the division of labour 45. The privatisation of virtue and of painting 54. The argument, and remarks on the 'public' and gender 63.
I SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS	69
Introductory: the coherence of the Discourses 69. The Discourses and the history of painting 72. Citizenship and the ability to abstract from particulars 76. The philosophical aesthetic 82. The central form and the body of the public 90. Form, fable, and character: the dangers of ambiguity 99. Private art and private interpretation 112. Originality and nobility 124. The discourse of custom 136. A customary community of taste 141. A new code of laws 158.
II JAMES BARRY	163
Introductory: Barry and Reynolds 163. Barry's "Inquiry" 165. Public and private bodies: Grace, Character, and Deformity 173. A democratic republic of taste 182. The relation of form and fable 187. The well- and ill-employed 192. The history and division of art 199. The knowledge and character of the painter 209. Physiognomy, individuality, and the division of labour 214.

III A BLAKE DICTIONARY	222
Introductory: Blake and Romanticism 222. 'Original' (I) 225. 'Character' 231. 'Individual' 237. 'Original' (II) 244. 'Public' 253.
IV HENRY FUSELI	258
Introductory: the two voices of Fuseli 258. The history of painting in Greece 262. The history of painting in modern Europe 273. The privatisation of modern society and the decay of 'higher art' 279. Two accounts of the hierarchy of genres 283. 'The painter of mankind' and 'the painter of humanity' 291. The composition of a privatised society 296.
V BENJAMIN ROBERT HAYDON AND WILLIAM HAZLITT: TWO ENCYCLOPAEDIA ARTICLES	308
Haydon: public style and individual genius 308. The composition of Hazlitt's article 314. 'The immediate imitation of nature' 316. The aristocracy of character 320. Hazlitt and Reynolds 326. Private art and public patronage 336. Conclusion 338.
Notes	343
Index	363