

Contents

Acknowledgments	iv
Notes to the Teacher	ix
Chapter One What Is Language?	1
Language includes writing, iconic language, and paralanguage – Hierarchy of phonology, morphology, syntax, and semantics – Paradigmatic and syntagmatic views of language
Chapter Two How Has Language Developed?	10
Language is distinctively human – Intricacy of human speech mechanism – Behaviorist and innatist hypotheses of acquisition
Chapter Three Who Controls Language?	18
Why agreement is needed – How agreement is reached – How agreement is constantly changing
Chapter Four What Is Language Play?	28
Using language creatively is innate – Language play is part of most aspects of life – Forms and media of language play – Language play in the development of modern English
Chapter Five Why Study the Language of Advertising?	45
Modern advertising techniques are sophisticated – Product names facilitate marketing techniques – Special effects through violating grammar rules – Advertising influences people without their realiz- ing it

Chapter Six The Sounds of English	55
How speakers make sounds different – How sounds influence grammar – How sounds relate to the real world
Chapter Seven Playing with the Sounds of Language	66
How children play with sounds – How intonation patterns affect meaning – How meanings affect pronunciation – How similar-sounding words are confused accidentally and on purpose – How similar sounds are substituted
Chapter Eight Repetition and Rhyme	78
Repetition as a phonological device – Alliteration, assonance, and reduplication for effect – Different kinds of rhyme and different effects
Chapter Nine How the Sounds of Language Change	90
Changes with time – How assimilation and dissimilation affect pronunciation – New words created through clipping and blending
Chapter Ten English Orthography	99
Major types of writing systems – Alphabetical systems – Deviation based on knowledge of orthographic conventions
Chapter Eleven The Consistency of English Spelling	120
The English spelling system – Inconsistencies – Reasons for inconsistencies – What educators and linguists are doing about inconsistencies
Chapter Twelve English Word Formation	137
How speakers shape words to fit needs – How speakers join words and morphemes for unusual effects – Phrase meanings differ from meaning of the words combined – Borrowed words
Chapter Thirteen The Metaphorical Process	157
Universality of comparison-making in language – Dead metaphors versus live metaphors – Similes, proverbs, eponyms, and metaphors
Chapter Fourteen English Sentence Formation	177
Kernel sentences – Transformed sentences – Conjoined sentences – Language play uses all sentence types
Chapter Fifteen The Nature of Discourse	197
What makes a discourse – Expectations of listeners for a discourse
Chapter Sixteen Investigating Meaning	205
Contradictions, paradoxes, and tautologies – Ambiguity and vagueness – Presuppositions affect meaning – Truth is a relative rather than an absolute concept

Chapter Seventeen The Effects of Context 220

Effects of psychological, linguistic, and physical contexts – People and animals use body language – Language serves social needs – Anachronisms used for interesting effects

Sources Cited 240

Further Readings 240

Index 245