

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
Series Editors' Preface	ix
Introduction: Foul Minds and Foul Mouths – Censorship and a Turn to Genre Fiction	1
Part I: Fantasy
Part I Introduction	27
1 'The book is a sort of touch-stone to other people': Sexology, the Invert and Desire in Katharine Burdekin's Utopian Fiction	31
2 'Ghost desire': The Lesbian Occult and Natalie Clifford Barney's The One Who is Legion or A.D.'s After-life	59
Part II: History
Part II Introduction	83
3 'Spiritual progenitors' and the Historical Biographies of Margaret Goldsmith and Mary Gordon	90
4 'I dislike the correct thing in clothes': Virginia Woolf's Orlando: A Biography and the Cross-Dressing Historical Romance	108

Part III: Crime
Part III Introduction	137
5 'Murder is a queer crime': The Lesbian Criminal and Female Communities in Detective Fiction	144
6 'Lizzie Borden took an axe': Repetition and Heterosexual Crime in Gertrude Stein's Detective Fiction	169
Coda	189
Bibliography	194
Index	215