

Contents

About the Contributors	viii
Introduction: Derrida and the Future of the Liberal Arts Mary Caputi and Vincent J. Del Casino Jr	1
Part 1
1 Derrida, Deconstruction, and the University Mary Caputi, Vincent J. Del Casino Jr, and Keith Woodward	13
2 What Is the Institutional Form of Thinking? Simon Critchley	37
Part 2
3 Grammatology Revisited: Derrida on Language, Truth, and Deviant Logic Christopher Norris	49
4 Derrida and Literary Studies Jonathan Culler	80
5 Deconstructing History Mark Mason	93
6 Third Wave Feminism, Derridean Raggicking, and the Liberal Arts Mary Caputi	122
7 Reading and Teaching Derrida in Departments of French and Francophone Literature and Cultural Studies Clorinda Donato	139
8 Derrida, Animals, and the Future of the Humanities Matthew Calarco	161
9 The Name of Sociology and the Trace of Derrida Colm J. Kelly	169
10 A Most Inhospitable Discipline: Jacques Derrida and the “Political Science to Come” Diane Rubenstein	194
11 Spacing Deconstruction Keith Woodward	224
An Afterward: In Brief Vincent J. Del Casino Jr and Mary Caputi	250
Bibliography	255
Index	269