

Contents

INTRODUCTION	xi
(i) Montecassino and the reform papacy	xi
(ii) The principal sources for the history of Montecassino in its golden age	xvi
(iii) Montecassino in modern historical study	xx
(iv) Montecassino's relations with outside authorities	xxvii
(v) Montecassino's immunity and exemption	xxxii
(vi) The papal reform	xxxiv
I. THE GOLDEN AGE OF MONTECASSINO	1
(i) The building up of Montecassino's resources and monastic life	2
(a) The terra sancti Benedicti ; (b) Donations outside the terra sancti Benedicti ; (c) The construction and embellishment of the new basilica and the other monastic buildings; (d) Gifts of money and precious objects to Montecassino; (e) Montecassino's pre-eminence in learning and letters
(ii) Montecassino's reputation and influence as a centre of Christian life in South Italy	28
(a) Montecassino and the monastic order; (b) Montecassino and the South Italian church
(iii) Conclusions	44
II. MONTECASSINO AND ROME—THE PURSUIT OF REFORM	46
(i) The development of the Roman curia and its government of the church	48
(ii) Montecassino and Rome	56
(a) The papacy and abbatial elections at Montecassino; (b) Papal honours conferred upon the abbots of Montecassino in their monastic capacity; (c) Material aid by Montecassino for the papacy; (d) The employment of the abbots of Montecassino in the papal service; (e) Cassinese monks in the papal service
(iii) Montecassino and the reform of the church	71
(a) Renovatio ; (b) The evidence of Abbot Desiderius' Dialogues ; (c) Simony; (d) Chastity; (e) Martyrdom and the eremitical life; (f) The Berengarian controversy; (g) Canon law
(iv) Conclusions	102

III. ROME, MONTECASSINO, AND THE NORMANS—THE POLITICS OF REALISM AND REFORM	107
(i) The papacy, the Normans, and Montecassino to 1061	108
(ii) Pope Alexander II, the Cadalan Schism, and Montecassino	118
(iii) Montecassino, the Normans, and Pope Gregory VII, 1073–7	122
(iv) Montecassino, the Normans, and Pope Gregory VII, 1077–80	131
(v) Montecassino and Pope Gregory VII in a wider conflict, 1080–5	136
(a) 1080; (b) 1081; (c) 1082: events at Rome; (d) 1082: events in South Italy; (e) 1083; (f) 1084–5
IV. ABBOT DESIDERIUS AS POPE VICTOR III	177
(i) Pope Gregory VII's final testament	181
(ii) Abbot Desiderius and the papal election: 1085	185
(iii) Abbot Desiderius and the papal election: 1086	187
(iv) Abbot Desiderius and the papal election: 1087	201
(v) Abbot Desiderius as Pope Victor III	207
V. AFTER 1087	214
(i) Montecassino's identification with conservatively Gregorian elements in the Roman curia	214
(a) The election of Pope Urban II; (b) Abbot Oderisius I and Pope Urban II; (c) Bruno of Segni and Pope Paschal II
(ii) The crisis of Cassinese affairs in the 1120s and 1130s	221
(a) The onset of crisis; (b) The Anacletan Schism; (c) Peter the Deacon
(iii) Pope Victor III's posthumous reputation and image	228
VI. CONCLUSION	231
APPENDICES
I. Archbishop Guibert of Ravenna's Accession as the Antipope Clement III	235
II. The Oppenheim Promissio	237
III. Evidence for a Continuous Source underlying Parts of the Continuation of the Montecassino Chronicle	239
IV. Henry IV's Supposed Diplomas of 1082 for Prince Jordan of Capua and for Montecassino	245
V. The Judicium de Regno et Sacerdotio	247
VI. A Henrician Manifesto Regarding Gregory VII's Last Acts	250
VII. Abbot Desiderius' Election as Pope according to the Montecassino Chronicle	251
VIII. Victor III's Pontificate in the Montecassino Chronicle	257
IX. Events at Bari in 1086–7	263

Contents

ix

MAPS

1. South Italy 267
2. The terra sancti Benedicti 268

SELECT BIBLIOGRAPHY 269

INDEX 289