

Contents

Preface	page xi
1 Introduction : societies as subjects for science	1
What are societies made of?	1
The dimensions of social structure	12
Roles and systacts	20
Mobility of persons and roles	27
Competitive selection and social evolution	37
Inter-societal comparisons and principles of taxonomy	48
Conclusion	60
2 Social relations	61
The range of variation	61
Standard roles and routine careers	70
Functional differentiation and the accretion of power	76
Ranks, distances and barriers	86
Systactic identity and collective consciousness	97
Pervasive roles and central institutions	113
Conclusion	121
3 Social structure	123
Stability and dissent	123
Reproduction, polarization and compression	138
Systactic patterns and modes of the distribution of power	148
Contradictions and constraints	172
Functional alternatives (1)	182
Functional alternatives (2)	208
Functional alternatives (3)	244
Inter-societal relations	266
Conclusion	283
4 Social evolution	285
Processes of change	285
Regressions and catastrophes	310
Dead-ends and turning-points	320
Rebellions, reforms and revolutions	340
Test cases (1)	367
Test cases (2)	386
Test cases (3)	411

Hegemony and decline	433
Conclusion	448
List of references	451
Index	481