

Acknowledgments	8
Introduction	9
Biographical Notes	25

I. WALL: EXODUS, OR THE VOLUNTARY PRISONERS OF ARCHITECTURE, LONDON 1972 31

The Wall as a Means of Division, Exclusion, and Difference	33
Good Half and Bad Half of the City: Exodus, or The Voluntary Prisoners of Architecture	33
Decision-Making and the Authority of the Plan	42
Somatology and the Fictitious Entity of the Prison	49
Deterministic Form and Flexibility	52
Delimiting the World and Enabling Difference	57
Taking Place and the Sacred Nature of City Walls	59

The Ideal City and Other Models of Utopian Life	63
The Closed and the Open Society as Ideal Worlds	63
Nova Insula Utopia , or The Nowhere Place	66
Urban Vacancy and the Disappearance of Public Space	68
Reinventing Utopia, or Daily Life Beyond Necessity	70

Utopia Zero Degree, or Freedom Beyond Planning	73
The Manhattan Skyscraper as Utopia Zero Degree	73
The City as Script and Social Condenser	76
Amplifying the Program within Structures of Control	80
The Wall as a Means of Freedom Beyond Planning	82

2. VOID: VILLE NOUVELLE MELUN-SÉNART, PARIS 1987 87

Failed Agencies of Modern Urbanism	89
Planning Makes No Difference	89
Chaos and Nothingness: Ville Nouvelle Melun-Sénart	91
Metropolis and Disorder, or The City Without Qualities	99

Void and Future Development	105
The Watertight Formula of the Modern City	105
Tabula Rasa and Prospective Preservation	109
The Grid as Field of Projection	112
Void as Environment of Control and Choice	116
Infrastructure and Kit-of-Parts Architecture	116
Experiments of the Non-Plan and the Unhouse	119
The City as Social Work of Art	122
The Armature of Genericity	125
Critical Theory and the Architect's Status	125
The End of the Dialectic City	129
The Operating System of the Roma Quadrata	131
City Planning and Bricolage Technique	135
3. MONTAGE: MAISON À BORDEAUX, FRANCE 1994–1998	139
Dismantling Modernist Fragments	141
The Armature of Modernism: The Maison à Bordeaux	141
Architectural Promenade and Sequential Perception	144
Dismantlement and Disappearance	151
Between Modernist and Surrealist Ideas	157
Transgression and the Accursed Share in Architecture	165
The Rational and Irrational Side of Architecture	168
Architecture as Paranoid Critical Activity	168
Maritime Analogy	171
Un Cadavre Exquis	175
Metaphoric Planning and the Skyscraper Diagram	177
Montage and Filmic Reality	181
The Metropolis as Manifesto of Modern Life	181
Inventing Reality through Writing	185
Post-Structuralist Theory, or The Whole, Real, There	189
Montage and Creative History	193

4. TRAJECTORY: DUTCH EMBASSY, BERLIN 1999–2003	199
The Trajectory as Lived Experience of the Body	201
The Wall and the Cube: The Dutch Embassy in Berlin	201
The Pliable Surface as Inside-Out City	208
The Car as Modernist Sign of Motion and Lived Experience	215
Psychogeographic Mapping of the City	217
Architecture as Event, Transcript, and Folie	222
Identity and Aura, or The Trajectory as Historical Narrative	227
Historical Aura as Source of Identity	227
Displacement, Appropriation, and Erasure of Identity	232
Projecting National Identity, or The Typical and the Unique	235
The Dioscuri Motif, or Standardization and Individuality	237
Junkspace as the End of the Typical and the Generic	241
The Typical and the Generic	241
Junkspace as Dérive	245
Generic versus Brand	248
Typology and Flexibility, or Frame for Change	253
The Trajectory as Diagram of Performance	255
5. INFRASTRUCTURE: PUBLIC LIBRARY, SEATTLE 1999–2004	261
Expanding the Program of Semi-Public Space	263
Structures for Non-Specific Events	263
The Diagrammatic Section: The Seattle Public Library	267
Stable and Unstable Zones, or The Event-Structure of Semi-Public Space	273
Infrastructure Diagrams of Circulation	277
The Dialectic between Needle and Globe Structure	277
The Elevator as a Diagram of Discontinuity	283
The Escalator as a Diagram of Continuity and Circulation	288
Shopping and the Public Sphere	291
Technological Determinism and the Public Sphere	294
The Technological Sublime as Social Event	294
Infrastructural Techno-Utopias	298
Public Space as “Air-Conditioning Project”	300

6. SHAPE: CCTV, BEIJING 2002–2008	305
The Outdated Typology of the Skyscraper	307
An Adaptive Species: The CCTV Building in Beijing	307
New Typologies of the City	310
Shape as Content and Container	315
Neo-Liberal Conditions of Architectural Practice	317
Plasticity, or The Dialectic between Form and Shape	317
Post-Criticality	321
Originality and the Avant-Garde	324
Conclusion	329
Bibliography	338
Name Index	355
Imprint	368