

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
NEIL GILROY-SCOTT
The Deviant Language of Poetry	7
H. G. WIDDOWSON
Approaches to the Study of Literature: A Practitioner's View	17
H. L. B. MOODY
The problem. The task. Literature. The study of literature. A theory of literature. An approach to literature. The extrinsic. The intrinsic. The approach illustrated. Pedagogics. Conclusion. References.
Language for Literature	37
ALEX RODGER
Introduction. Part I: teaching literary skills—problems and principles. Literature as 'foregrounded discourse'. The primacy of communication-awareness and language consciousness. The need for communicative competence in ESL. The need for analytical skills and a critical metalanguage. The need for pedagogic dialogue. How not to teach English literature. Part II: interpreting a 'one-image' poem. Preliminaries. Analysis. References.
Stylistics and the Teaching of Literature	67
M. H. SHORT
Stylistics and criticism. Teaching English literature overseas. Stylistics and criticism—an example from Joyce's A portrait of the artist as a young man . Conclusion. References.
Stress, Rhythm and Intonation in the Study of English Literature	85
SUSAN RAMSARAN
Introduction. Stress and rhythm. Contrast and nuclear tone. Tone unit boundaries. The contribution of phonetics. References.
Language as a Literary Medium: An Undergraduate Course	103
GRAHAM TRENGOVE

On the Goals of a Reading Programme for Students of English as a Foreign Literature 121

KEITH JONES

Linguistic Approaches to Literature: A Select Bibliography 135

YOLANDE CANTU

Discourse analysis. Literary stylistics. Application of linguistics to particular genres. Statistical studies. Semiology. Teaching. Some traditional approaches to style. Periodicals.