

Contents

Lists of Figures, Concordances and Tables	x
Series Editor's Preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
Data Conventions and Terminology	xv
Notes on Corpus Data and Software	xvii
Part I Concepts and History	1
1 Texts and Text Types	3
1.1 The data	4
1.2 The organization of the book	5
1.3 A simple model: texts, production and reception	6
1.4 Content, author and audience	8
1.5 Texts and text types	10
1.6 Text types and institutions	12
1.7 Three studies	14
1.7.1 Advertising	15
1.7.2 Newspapers	16
1.7.3 Scientific research articles	18
1.8 Summary	20
2 British Traditions in Text Analysis: Firth, Halliday and Sinclair	22
2.1 Principles: from Firth via Halliday to Sinclair	23
2.2 Alternative traditions	23
2.3 Linguistics as an applied social science	24
2.4 Grammar and discourse: data and models	26
2.5 Methodology: attested data and text corpora	28

2.6	Form and meaning, lexis and grammar	35
2.7	Routines of cultural transmission	41
2.8	Beyond Saussurian dualisms	44
2.9	Data, description and theory	45
2.10	Description and theory, methods and applications	49
	Appendix: Notes on the intellectual background	49
3	Institutional Linguistics: Firth, Hill and Giddens	51
3.1	Institutional facts	51
3.2	Firth on social semantics	52
3.3	Hill on institutional linguistics	54
3.4	Dualisms of subject and object, micro and macro	56
3.5	Giddens on the constitution of society	57
3.6	Projects for an institutional linguistics	59
3.7	Sexist language	61
3.8	Spoken and written language and linguistic theory	63
	3.8.1 Dictionaries	64
	3.8.2 Literature	66
	3.8.3 School textbooks	67
	3.8.4 Vocabulary	70
3.9	Lexical density: an analysis of two corpora	71
	3.9.1 Interpretation	73
	3.9.2 Text samples	75
3.10	Conclusion	77
	Appendix: Further notes on the intellectual background	77
Part II	Text and Corpus Analysis	79
4	Baden-Powell: a Comparative Analysis of Two Short Texts	81
4.1	Organization of the chapter	81
4.2	Baden-Powell	82
4.3	The texts: production and reception	83
4.4	Content analysis	84
4.5	HAPPY and HAPPINESS	85
	4.5.1 Text G: Guides text	86
	4.5.2 Text S: Scouts text	87
4.6	Comparative data	88
4.7	Practical implications: sexist language	90
4.8	Theoretical implications: meaning in texts and in language	91
4.9	Educational implications	93

4.10	Other analyses	94
4.11	Summary	97
	Appendix: Baden-Powell's last messages	98
5	Judging the Facts: an Analysis of One Text in Its Institutional Context	101
5.1	Organization of the chapter	101
5.2	Interactions in social institutions	102
5.3	The linguistic encoding of facts	103
5.4	Words and connotations	106
5.5	The data	108
5.6	Analysis of the data	108
	5.6.1 Length and discourse markers	111
	5.6.2 Connotations of individual words	111
	5.6.3 Modal verbs	113
	5.6.4 Presuppositions	117
	5.6.5 Syntactic complexity	119
5.7	Conclusion	121
	Appendix: Other studies of courtroom language	122
6	Human and Inhuman Geography: a Comparative Analysis of Two Long Texts and a Corpus	125
6.1	Organization of the chapter	125
6.2	Introductory discussion	126
6.3	The importance of comparative data	127
6.4	Criticisms of discourse analysis	128
6.5	Texts and text fragments	129
6.6	Data and hypotheses	130
6.7	Computer-assisted comparative analysis	131
6.8	Example 1. Ergative verbs: the syntax of key words	131
	6.8.1 Definitions and terminology	132
	6.8.2 Data analysis	134
	6.8.3 Comparison of texts G and E	134
	6.8.4 Interpretation	137
	6.8.5 Comparison of texts G and E and LOB	138
	6.8.6 Interpretation	138
	6.8.7 Variation across verbs	139
	6.8.8 Comparison of texts G and E: passives	140
6.9	Interpretative problems	143
	6.9.1 Further notes on ergatives	143
	6.9.2 Probabilistic patterns	144

6.9.3	Another analysis: unexpected findings	145
6.10	Example 2. Projecting clauses	146
6.10.1	Definitions	147
6.10.2	World-creating predicates	148
6.10.3	Comparison of texts G and E	150
6.10.4	Interpretation	151
6.11	Some principles for text analysis	152
6.12	Conclusion: computer-assisted studies	154
	Appendix: Further notes on ergativity	154
7	Keywords, Collocations and Culture: the Analysis of Word Meanings across Corpora	157
7.1	Organization of the chapter	157
7.2	Text and discourse: different senses of 'discourse'	158
7.3	Introductory example: language and nation	158
7.3.1	Different discourses	160
7.4	Firth on focal words	165
7.5	Williams on keywords	166
7.6	Other studies of cultural keywords	168
7.7	The formal component: collocations	172
7.7.1	Quantitative methods	174
7.8	Other examples of collocations and semantic prosodies	176
7.9	The sociological component: encoding culture in lexis	176
7.10	Designing a dictionary of keywords in British culture	181
7.10.1	Lifestyle and professionalization	182
7.10.2	Example analyses	183
7.10.3	Ambiguity of keywords	188
7.11	Sample dictionary entries: culture and cultural	189
7.12	Conclusion	193
8	Towards a Modal Grammar of English: a Matter of Prolonged Fieldwork	196
8.1	Organization of the chapter	196
8.2	Introductory example: propositional information	197
8.3	The (limited) relevance of speech act theory	200
8.4	Evidentiality, factivity, modality	200
8.5	Summary	202
8.6	Lexical, propositional and illocutionary commitment	203
8.7	Degree and manner of commitment	203
8.8	Modality and lexis	206
8.8.1	Morphology and pragmatic information	206

8.8.2	Lexical commitment	208
8.8.3	Vague lexis	210
8.9	Modality and illocutionary force	211
8.9.1	Explicit illocutionary prefaces	211
8.9.2	Two types of speech act	214
8.10	Modality and the truth value of propositions	215
8.10.1	Simple forms versus ing-forms of verbs	215
8.10.2	Verb classes and uses	216
8.10.3	Other parallels: can plus verb	220
8.10.4	Other verbal forms	222
8.10.5	Private verbs	223
8.10.6	Logical and pragmatic connectors	224
8.11	Modal grammar	226
8.12	Applied linguistics	227
8.13	Conclusion	228
9	The Classic Questions	230
9.1	Language and corpora	230
9.2	Language and thought	234
9.3	Conclusion	236
	Notes	238
	References	245
	Subject Index	259
	Name Index	264