

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	7
List of Abbreviations	11
1. Survey of Scholarship	13
1.0 Introduction	13
1.1 A Theory of Language Change	18
1.2 Traditional Approaches to Historical Linguistics	21
1.3 Transformational-Generative Grammar and Historical Linguistics	25
2. A Case Grammar Model for Historical Analysis	32
2.0 Introduction	32
2.1 Fillmore's Case Grammar	33
2.2 Transitivity, and the Deep Cases.	34
2.3 Marino's Case Grammar for Early Modern English	41
2.4 Further Modifications Proposed for Case Grammar Theory	49
2.5 A Remark on Nominalization.	56
2.6 A General Case Grammar Model	58
2.7 Conclusion.	63
3. The Historical Problem	64
3.0 Introduction	64
3.1 Description of the Problem: the Genitive Object.	65
3.2 The Traditional Treatment of the Problem	68
3.3 A Transformational Treatment of the Problem	79

3.4 A Case Grammar Treatment of the Problem	81
3.5 Conclusion	116
4. Case Grammar and Diachronic Theory	118
4.0 Introduction	118
4.1 Some General Conclusions About the Four Types	118
4.2 The Lexicon and the Theory of Language Change	121
4.3 Case Grammar and Implications for the Weinreich, et al., Theory of Language Change	123
4.4 Conclusion	127
Bibliography	128
Index	132