

Contents

Foreword	vii
INTRODUCTION	1
1 TO VS ZERO: A MEANINGFUL DISTINCTION?	11
2 THE INFINITIVE INCIDENT TO FULL VERBS	15
2.1 Two types of meaning expressed by the to infinitive	19
2.2 The infinitive after have	22
2.3 The infinitive after help	23
2.4 The infinitive after verbs of perception	29
2.5 The infinitive after find	47
2.6 The infinitive after know	48
2.7 The infinitive after verbs denoting causation	56
2.8 The infinitive after thank and bid	80
2.9 The infinitive after let and allow	83
2.10 Conclusion	88
3 THE INFINITIVE INCIDENT TO AUXILIARY VERBS	91
3.1 Auxiliary do	91

3.2	The modal auxiliaries	93
3.3	Need and Dare	99
3.4	Ought	114
3.5	Summary	114
4	THE INFINITIVE NOT INCIDENT TO ANOTHER VERB	116
4.1	Introduction	116
4.2	The to infinitive in exclamations denoting a non-realized event	117
4.3	The verb and the category of person	118
4.4	The infinitive of reaction	123
4.5	The to infinitive as subject	126
4.6	The to infinitive in exclamations denoting a realized event	132
4.7	The bare infinitive in exclamations	133
4.8	The bare infinitive after rather than and sooner than	134
4.9	The infinitive and the category of person	135
4.10	Conclusion	139
5	THE INFINITIVE IN THE ENGLISH VERB SYSTEM	141
5.1	The bare infinitive's place in the system and the role of to	141
5.2	Generalized person	146
5.3	Prospects	147
	NOTES	150
	REFERENCES	157
	Index	166