

CONTENTS

List of Plates	xv
List of Figures	xvi
List of Tables	xvii
Abbreviations	xviii
Introduction: Economic and Social Interpretation of the First World War	1
Part One. How was Germany defeated?	21
1. Society under Siege: Germany, 1914–1918	23
2. Food Reform and Food Science	39
3. Did Germany really Starve?	45
4. Food and the German State	54
5. Collapse	69
Part Two. The Agrarian Bond: The United States, Canada and Australia	79
6. Late-Victorian Britain: An Import Economy	81
7. Causes of the Agricultural Depression, 1870–1914	93
8. The Sod House against the Manor House	104
9. ‘Like Rats in a Trap’: British Urban Society and Overseas Opportunities	121
10. Coast, Interior and Metropolis	135
11. Wheat and Empire in Canada	144
12. Asian Labour on the Pacific Rim: The Struggle for Exclusion, 1860–1907	164
13. Mackenzie King’s Odyssey	176
14. Asian Labour and White Nationalism, 1907–1914	198
Part Three. The Atlantic Orientation	215
15. Fear of Famine in British War Plans, 1890–1908	217
16. Power and Plenty: Naval Mercantilism, 1905–1908	233
17. The Atlantic Orientation: Hankey, Fisher and Esher	244
18. The Dominion Dimension	264

19. Morality and Admiralty: 'Jacky' Fisher, Economic Warfare and International Law	270
20. Blockade and its Enemies, 1909–1912	285
21. Preparation and Action, 1912–1914	300
Part Four. The Other Side of the North Sea	319
22. Economic Development and National Security in Wilhelmian Germany	321
23. Germany: Economic Preparation and the Decision for War	335
24. 'A Second Decision for War': the U-Boat Campaign	354
25. Shaping the Peace: The Role of the Hinterlands	368
26. Neither Dominion nor Peace: Germany after the Armistice	386
Conclusion	402
List of Sources Cited	409
Index	439