

Contents

INTRODUCTION THE TROUBLES BESETTING PSYCHOTHERAPY AND A PROPOSED SOLUTION	1
CHAPTER 1 TOWARD THE DEFINITION OF PSYCHOTHERAPY	9
Standards for Defining Psychotherapy	10
Psychotherapy Defined by Its Goals	11
Psychotherapy Defined by Its Type of Procedures	12
Psychotherapy Defined by the Practitioner	13
Psychotherapy Defined by the Relationship	17
Conclusions	19
CHAPTER 2 MANIPULATIONS IN THE MEETING OF THERAPIST AND CLIENT	21
Varying the Setting	26
Varying the "Hour"	28
Varying the Frequency	32
Varying the Duration	37
Conclusions	43
CHAPTER 3 MANIPULATIONS OF THE PARTICIPANTS IN PSYCHOTHERAPY	45
Varying the Number of Therapists	46
Varying the Number of Clients	51

Controls of the Therapist	53
Techniques to Promote Client Communication	56
Techniques to Alter Symptoms	59
Conclusions	66
CHAPTER 4 AN EXAMINATION OF THE GOOD THERAPIST CONCEPT	67
The Good Client	67
Characteristics of the Good Therapist	70
The Good Therapist or the Appropriate Therapist	81
Conclusions	92
CHAPTER 5 AN EXAMINATION OF THE METASYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY	93
The Case for Free Will	95
The Case for Determinism	97
Resolutions of the Controversy	102
Relevance of the Issue to Psychotherapists	105
Conclusions	121
CHAPTER 6 THE DEFINITION OF PSYCHOTHERAPY	123
Discussion of the Terms of the Definition	124
Implications of the Definition for Research	128
Further Implications of the Definition	133
Conclusions	135
REFERENCES	137
INDEX	151