

---

CONTENTS

---

PREFACE	xi
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xix

Introduction	1
---------------------	----------

PART ONE

1. Authority, "Cognitive Atheism," and the Aims of Interpretation: The Literary Theory of E. D. Hirsch	15
2. Deconstruction in America: The Literary Criticism of J. Hillis Miller	31
3. Constraints and Politics in the Literary Theory of Stanley Fish	51

PART TWO

4. Self as Subject in English Studies	67
5. English Studies and the Emergence of the New Criticism	85
6. The Institutionalization of the New Criticism	104

PART THREE

7. Reviewing the State of Criticism, I	125
Trilling in Our Time	125
The Rest of Wholeness: F. R. Leavis	129
Leavis's Authority	135
The Kenneth Burke Problem	139
A Critic's Burden: R. P. Blackmur's Reading of Henry Adams	146
Criticism and the Academy	159

8. Reviewing the State of Criticism, II	163
Making Judgments: Criticism Past, Present, and Future	163
Reflections on the Milton Industry	175
Directions for Criticism: Geoffrey Hartman and Stanley Fish	188
Beyond Formalism: The Politics of Criticism	200
Politics and Interpretation	205
9. Reviewing the State of Criticism, III	209
Edward W. Said, Orientalism	209
Gerald Graff, Literature against Itself	215
Frank Lentricchia, After the New Criticism	220
René Girard, "To Double Business Bound" and Hayden White, Tropics of Discourse	224
Wayne Booth, Critical Understanding	229
Grant Webster, The Republic of Letters	232
Ihab Hassan, The Right Promethean Fire	236
Christopher Norris, Deconstruction: Theory and Practice	238
Success and Failure in Literary Theory	243
Conclusion	247
Epilogue	275
NOTES	279
INDEX	303