

Contents

Preface	7
1. Introduction	15
Theories of the Novel, 1945–1960	15
Theories of the Novel in the Early Twentieth Century	20
Theories of Narrative: Frye, Booth, and French
Structuralism	21
Recent Trends	26
2. From Novel to Narrative	31
Kinds of Narrative	31
The Romance-Novel Matrix: History, Psychology, and Stories of Life	39
Does “the Novel” Exist?	42
The Novel as Oppositional Discourse	44
Formalist and Semiotic Theories of Narrative Kinds	46
Summary	53
3. From Realism to Convention	57
Characteristics of Realism	57
Realism Viewed as a Convention	63
Narrative Conventions in History	71
Narrative in Autobiography and Psychoanalysis	75
Conventions and Reality	79
4. Narrative Structure: Preliminary Problems	81
“Open Form” and Its Predecessors	83
Endings and Beginnings in Life, Literature, and Myth	85

Contents

Structural Analysis of Narrative Sequences	90
Uses and Abuses of Structural Analysis	102
5. Narrative Structure: A Comparison of Methods	107
Varieties of Narrative Theory	107
Functional and Thematic Synthesis in Tomashevsky and Barthes	111
Functions and Motifs	112
The Composition of Character	116
Indices, Informants, and Static Motifs	122
Narrative Temporality	123
Syuzhet, Theme, and Narration	126
6. Points of View on Point of View	130
Point of View in American and English Criticism	133
The Grammar of Narration	136
Structures of Narrative Representation: Focus	142
The Languages and Ideologies of Narration	147
7. From Writer to Reader: Communication and Interpretation	152
The Communication Model	153
Kinds of Readers	156
Reading	162
8. Frames of Reference: Metafiction, Fiction, and Narrative	173
Crossing Theoretical Borders: Models of Misreading	175
Irony, Parody, and Metafiction	178
What Is Fiction?	181
What Is Narrative?	187
Appendix:	191
The Lover's Gift Regained	191
Geoffrey Chaucer, "The Shipman's Tale"	193
Katherine Mansfield, "Bliss"	200
Bibliography	212
Index	239