

Table of contents

Introduction	1
Peter Collins
PART 1. Inner Circle Englishes
Diachronic variation in the grammar of Australian English: Corpus-based explorations	15
Peter Collins
At the crossroads of change: Possession, periphrasis, and prescriptivism in Victoria English	43
Alexandra D'Arcy
Do-support in early New Zealand and Australian English	65
Marianne Hundt
The progressive in Irish English: Looking both ways?	87
John M. Kirk
Cross-variety diachronic drifts and ephemeral regional contrasts: An analysis of modality in the extended Brown family of corpora and what it can tell us about the New Englishes	119
Christian Mair
Passives of so-called 'ditransitives' in nineteenth century and present-day Canadian English	147
Matthias L.G. Meyer
Dual adverbs in Australian English	179
Pam Peters
The evolution of epistemic marking in West Australian English	205
Celeste Rodríguez Louro
May and might in nineteenth century Irish English and English English	221
Marije Van Hattum
The present perfect and the preterite in Australian English: A diachronic perspective	247
Xinyue Yao

PART 2. Outer Circle Englishes

Recent diachronic change in the progressive in Philippine English Peter Collins	271
Linguistic change in a multilingual setting: A case study of quotatives in Indian English Julia Davydova	297
Patterns of regularisation in British, American and Indian English: A closer look at irregular verbs with t/ed variation Bernard De Clerck &amp; Klaar Vanopstal	335
An apparent time study of the progressive in Nigerian English Robert Fuchs &amp; Ulrike Gut	373
American influence on written Caribbean English: A diachronic analysis of newspaper reportage in the Bahamas and in Trinidad and Tobago Stephanie Hackert &amp; Dagmar Deuber	389
Cultural keywords in context: A pilot study of linguistic acculturation in South Asian Englishes Joybrato Mukherjee &amp; Tobias Bernaisch	411
Recent quantitative changes in the use of modals and quasi-modals in the Hong Kong, British and American printed press: Exploring the potential of Factiva * for the diachronic investigation of World Englishes Dirk Noël &amp; Johan Van der Auwera	437
The development of an extended time period meaning of the progressive in Black South African English Bertus Van Rooy &amp; Caroline Piotrowska	465
Index	485