

Contents

List of tables	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1. Aphra Behn's dramatic techniques in prose: credibility and female power	25
i. Behn's and Southerne's Oroonokos : individuals and groups	29
ii. Parallels between the narrator and Oroonoko	41
iii. Echoes of Rover I	59
2. Performed emotion in Delarivier Manley's works: actors and voyeurs	73
i. Discovering emotion in Manley's plays	79
ii. Scenes in Manley's prose	90
iii. Validating female emotion in Memoirs of Europe and The Power of love	102
3. Hybrid dramatic-narrative techniques: William Congreve's Incognita and The Old batchelor	125
i. Staging lovers in Dryden's Assignment and Congreve's Incognita	134
ii. Scarron's influence upon Incognita	142
iii. Heartwell as satirical commentator in The Old         batchelor	151
4. Abandoning control over 'reality': author-characters in Henry Fielding's plays	167
i. The satirist satirized in Fielding's author-character plays	170
ii. Author-characters as Fielding's theatrical avatars	178

5. Self-conscious anti-realism: readers as actor-authors in Henry Fielding's prose	193
i. Fielding's self-ironizing author-characters	207
ii. Novel characters who comment metatheatrically	214
6. Conclusion	231
Bibliography	245
Index	259