

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	PAGE
I. THE LITERARY FRAMEWORK OF THE CANTERBURY TALES . . .	1
By Robert A. Pratt and Karl Young
Chaucer's familiarity with the framed story as an artistic device (1). Previous development of individual portraits (3). Early oriental framed-story collections (6). Framed stories in the classics (9); in Gower's Confessio (10); in the works of Boccaccio (11). Sercambi and his Novelliero and Novelle (21). Possibility of Chaucer's acquaintance with the works of Sercambi (31). Editorial principles employed in presenting textual material from the Novelle (33). Text of the Proemio (36). Titles of the novelle and texts and summaries of the intermezzi (42).
II. THE KNIGHT'S TALE	82
By Robert A. Pratt
Principal source in Boccaccio's Teseida (82). Battaglia's edition of the Teseida (82). Evidence concerning classification of manuscript used by Chaucer (85). Chaucer's indebtedness to the Teseida (87). Subsidiary sources of the Knight's Tale (88). Chaucer's modifications of the Teseida (88). Tables of correspondences between the Knight's Tale and the Teseida (90); between the Teseida and Chaucer's works in general (92). Summary of the Teseida (93).
III. THE MILLER'S TALE	106
By Stith Thompson
The three principal motifs (106). List of analogues (107). Text of novella by Masuccio (108); of Flemish fabliau (112); of historia by Valentin Schumann (118); of tale by Hans Sachs (120).
IV. THE REEVE'S TALE	124
By Walter Morris Hart
The two versions of Le Meunier et les .II. clers (124). Text of MS A (126); of MS B (127).
V. THE COOK'S TALE	148
By Earl DeWitt Lyon
Parallels to individual elements numerous in later humorous stories, but no single complete analogue (149). Parallels in details from contemporary records of the London underworld (152).

	PAGE
VI. THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE	155
By Margaret Schlauch
Direct source in Trivet's Chroniques (155). Relations between the Man of Law's Tale and Gower's Tale of Constance (155). Some details of the composition of the Life of Constance in Trivet (156). Manuscripts of Trivet (162). Recensions and manuscripts of Gower (164). Text of Trivet's Life of Constance from the Chroniques (165); of Gower's Tale of Constance (181).
VII. THE WIFE OF BATH'S PROLOGUE	207
By Bartlett J. Whiting
The Prologue a survey of medieval antifeminism drawn largely from four sources (207). Textual excerpts from Jerome's Epistola adversus Jovinianum (208); from Walter Map's Dissuasio Valerii (212); from Le Roman de la rose (213); from Deschamps' Le Miroir de mariage (215).
VIII. THE WIFE OF BATH'S TALE	223
By Bartlett J. Whiting
Uncertainty of relationship between the Wife's Tale and its three closest analogues (223). Text of Gower's Tale of Florent (224); of the Marriage of Sir Gawaine (235); of the Weddyng of Sir Gawen and Dame Ragnell (242). Textual excerpts on Midas from Ovid's Metamorphoses (265); on "gentillesse" from Dante's Purgatorio and Convivio (265), from Le Roman de la rose (267).
IX. THE FRIAR'S TALE	269
By Archer Taylor
Three early recensions of a similar tale (269). Text of three exempla (269). Excerpt from a form of the story by Der Stricker (272). Possible existence of early unrecorded variations (273). Three similar nineteenth-century stories, with brief excerpt from a French popular tale (274).
X. THE SUMMONER'S TALE	275
By Walter Morris Hart
Jacques de Baisieux and his Dis de le vescie à prestre (275). Text of Li Dis (277). Text of sources of exempla from Seneca's De ira (286).
XI. THE CLERK'S TALE	288
By J. Burke Severs
Early versions of the tale—Italian, Latin, French (288). Chaucer's use of Petrarch's Latin version and of an anonymous French translation of it (289). Chaucer's modifications of these sources (290). Editorial principles employed in preparing texts here presented (291). List of manuscripts and selected bibliography (292). Critical text of Petrarch's Latin version (296); of the anonymous Le Livre Griseldis (297).

TABLE OF CONTENTS

xiii

PAGE

XII. THE MERCHANT'S TALE 333

By Germaine Dempster

Relations to Deschamps' Miroir de mariage and textual excerpts from it (333). Relations to Boccaccio's Ameto and textual excerpts from it (339). Analogues, with texts, to the Blind Husband and the Fruit-Tree story: Novellino (341); Von einem Plinten (343); a Low German version (347); a great Russian version (350); a little Russian version (351); an Italian facezia (352); a Portuguese analogue (352); a fable of Adolphus (352); a version from Steinhöwels' Aesop (354); a version from Macho's Esope (355).

XIII. THE SQUIRE'S TALE 357

By H. S. V. Jones

No clear source of any section of the tale (357). Parallels in Prester John material with excerpts from the Latin epistola (357) and from the poem of Osswalt der Scribar (360). Parallels in the Cléomadès cycle (364), with summary of an Arabic tale (364), and summary and textual excerpts from the romance of Cléomadès (365). Analogues to the episode of Canacee and the falcon in the Hindu Kādani-barī (374); in the Arabian Nights (375).

XIV. THE FRANKLIN'S TALE 377

By Germaine Dempster and J. S. P. Tatlock

Various elements in the tale (377). Text from Boccaccio's Il Filocolo (377). Textual excerpts from Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia regum Britanniae (383). Textual extracts from lays—Doon (385); Le Freine (385); Milun (386); Equitan (387); Les dous amanz (390); Sir Tristrem (393); The Earl of Toulouse (394). Sources of Dorigen's exempla in textual extracts from Jerome's Adversus Jovinianum (395).

XV. THE PHYSICIAN'S TALE 398

By Edgar F. Shannon

The story of Appius and Virginia in Livy's History and medieval versions of it (398). Text of the story from Le Roman de la rose (399); from Livy's History (401). Textual excerpts from Ambrose's De virginibus (407).

	PAGE
XVI. THE PARDONER'S PROLOGUE	409
By Germaine Dempster
The Pardoner and Faux-Semblant, with textual excerpts from Le Roman de la rose (409). Textual excerpts of analogues to the Pardoner's "gaude" from Der Stricker's Pfaffe Amts (411); from a novella of Sercambi (413); an exemplum (414).
XVII. THE PARDONER'S TALE	415
By Frederick Tupper
No direct source but numerous significant analogues in novelle and exempla and in plays (415). Texts from Gualteruzzi's Le ciento novelle antike (Novellino) (416); from Borghini's Libro di novelle e di bel parlar gentile (417); from Morlini's Novellae (419); of two exempla in Klapper's collection (420); of three exempla in manuscripts of the British Museum (421). Texts from a Rappresentazione di Sant' Antonio (423); from Hans Sachs's Der Dot im Stock (429). Parallels to subsidiary material in textual excerpts from the first Elegy of Maximian (436); in exempla from Thomas of Cantimpré's Liber de apibus (439); from the Ayenbite of Inwit (437); from Jacob's Well (438); from John of Salisbury's Polycraticus (438).
XVIII. THE SHIPMAN'S TALE	439
By John W. Spargo
The Shipman's Tale in relation to the Decameron VIII, 1 and Sercambi's Novella XIX (439). Analysis of the general type of story (439). Text of Decameron VIII, 1 (441); of Sercambi's Novella XIX (443).
XIX. THE PRIORESS'S TALE	447
By Carleton Brown
A list of versions of the miracle: Group A (447); Group B (449); Group C (450). The earliest version of Group C (451). The relation of Group C to Group A (454). The tragic ending in Group C (455). The marvels added in later versions of Group C (457). The immediate source for the Prioress's Tale (460). Chaucer's modifications of the story (464). Texts of Group C (467).
XX. THE TALE OF SIR THOPAS	486
By Laura H. Loomis
Probable inspiration in manuscript collections of romances, including the Auchinleck MS (486). Other sources (492). Lists of topics illustrated by textual excerpts (494). Bibliographical note (494). Textual excerpts presenting: minstrel comments (496); the hero's appearance (504); the hero's pastimes (508); the hero in love and beloved (516); the hero in arms (526); the hero in combat (530); the hero's vow (541); the hero's praise (545); the hero "auntrous" (547); catalogue lists (550).

TABLE OF CONTENTS

XV

	PAGE
XXI. THE TALE OF MELIBEUS	560
By J. Burke Severs
Albertano of Brescia's treatises (560). Renaud de Louens' redaction of Albertano's Liber consolationis et consilii (560). Chaucer's slight deviations from Renaud (564). Editorial principles employed in preparing a critical text of Renaud (565). List of manuscripts and selected bibliography (567). Critical text of Renaud's Livre de Mellibee et Prudence (568).
XXII. THE MONK'S TALE.	615
By Robert K. Root
The Monk's Tale and Boccaccio's De casibus virorum illustrium (615) and a De casibus section of Le Roman de la rose (616). Lucifer and Adam (625). Samson and text from Boccaccio's De casibus (625). Hercules and texts from Boethius' De consolacione and Ovid's Metamorphoses (629). Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar (632). Zenobia and text from Boccaccio's De claris mulieribus (632). Pedro of Castile (636). Pierre de Lusignan and textual excerpt from Machaut's La Prise d'Alexandrie (636). Barnabo (637). Ugolino and text from Dante's Inferno (638). Nero (640). Holofernes (640). Antiochus (641). Alexander (641). Julius Caesar (642). Croesus (644).
XXIII. THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE	645
By James R. Hulbert
The problem of relationship between the Nun's Priest's Tale , the Roman de Renart , and Reinhart Fuchs (645). Uncertainty concerning immediate source of the exempla on dreams (646). Texts from Le Roman de Renart (646); from Reinhart Fuchs (658); of exempla from Valerius Maximus (662).
XXIV. THE SECOND NUN'S PROLOGUE AND TALE	664
By G. H. Gerould
The prologue: textual excerpts from Dante's Paradiso , hymns, Macrobius' Commentaria , Alanus de Insulis' Anticlaudianus (664). The legend: Chaucer's direct source probably a single text (667). Various recensions of the legend of St. Cecilia (668). Text from Legenda aurea (671); from Passio by Mombricitus (677).

	PAGE
XXV. THE CANON'S YEOMAN'S PROLOGUE AND TALE	685
By John W. Spargo
Handicaps to understanding medieval bases of alchemy (685). Texts of analogues to warnings against pursuit of alchemy: decree of Pope John XXII (691); Petrarch's De alchimia (692); excerpt from Gower's Confessio amantis (693). Text of analogue to alchemists' trickery in Sercambi's Novella XXI (694). Excerpts from texts on the science of alchemy: Petrus Bonus (695); Robert of York (697); "Senior" (697); Arnold of Villanova (698).
XXVI. THE MANCIPIE'S TALE	699
By James A. Work
Source of the narrative in Ovid or medieval derivative of Ovid (699). Textual extracts from the Metamorphoses (701); from Ovide Moralizé (702); from Gower's Confessio amantis (709); from Machaut's Le Livre du voir dit (711); from Integumenta Ovidii (716); from the Seven Sages of Rome (716). Textual excerpts of parallels to nonnarrative material in Boethius' De consolacione , Le Roman de la rose , Gaston Phebus' Le Livre de chasse (719).
XXVII. THE PARSON'S TALE	723
By Germaine Dempster
Relations of the Parson's Tale to Raymund of Pennaforte's Summa and to Peraldus' Summa vitiorum (723). An analogue in an Anglo-Norman Compileison (726). Parallels in Frère Laurent's Livre de vices et de vertus (728). Textual extracts from Raymund, on penance in general (729); on contrition (733); on confession (735). Outline of Peraldus' tract De accidia (741); textual extracts on the types of gluttony, 742; on some remedies against lust (744). Textual extracts from the Compileison on the Seven Sins and on pride (745); on the species of pride (747); on backbiting (748); on the five manners of gluttony (749); on some remedies against lust (750); on incentives to contrition (751); a survey of the sins in the section on confession (756). Textual excerpts from the chapter on lust in Frère Laurent's Livre (759).
INDEX	761