

Contents

Preface	vii
1 Francis of Assisi and the Pursuit of Learning	1
Introduction	1
Francis as the Enemy of Science? Images from the Hagiographical Tradition	2
Francis Accepting of Science? The Letter to Anthony of Padua	6
Francis the Gifted Idiota ?	8
The Necessity of Studies in an Apostolic Order	11
The Place of Studies in the 'Authentic' Writings	12
Tentative Conclusions	15
2 The Franciscan School System: Re-assessing the Early Evidence	19
Introduction	19
Francis's Ambivalence towards Learning	21
The Stimulation of Learning by Franciscan Minister Generals	24
Early Franciscan Study Houses or Studia Generalia with a Lectorate Program	26
Additional Anecdotal Evidence Concerning Lectors and Lectorate Training	39
The Evidence from the Pre-Narbonne Constitutions	45
Conclusion	49
3 Religious Life in the Franciscan School Network (13th Century)	51
The Emergence of a Franciscan School Network	52
Franciscan Novice Training and Spiritual Formation	57
Religious Formation after the Noviciate	61
Routines of Student Life and Study Organization	65
Spiritual Concerns in Sermons Addressed to Students and Teachers	68
The Collationes in Hexaemeron as a Franciscan Metanarrative of Religious Learning	76
Conclusion	81
4 Mendicant School Exegesis	83
Introduction	83
Early Mendicant Exegesis	85
Discussing Exegetical Method	91
Correcting the Biblical Text	95

Exegesis and the Impact of Joachimism	98
Later Thirteenth- and Early Fourteenth-century Developments	101
The Decline of Mendicant Exegesis?	106
Conclusion	110

5 'Franciscan Augustinianism': Musings about Labels and Late Medieval School Formation	111
The Problem of a 'Franciscan School'	112
Franciscan Augustinianism?	116
Augustinian Themes?	121
Conclusion	130
6 Franciscan School Networks, c. 1450–1650: A Provisional Sketch	132
The 'Conventual' Franciscan School Network in the Fifteenth Century	133
Observant Challenges	138
Conventual and Observant Positions on Education and the Pursuit of Degrees	142
The Conventual 'Loss' of Paris and Other Studia Generalia	146
Sixteenth and Seventeenth-Century Conventual Answers	150
Observant Continuities and Transformations	164
The Place of Studies among the Early Capuchins	187
Afterword	194
7 Franciscan Urban Preachers in Defense of Catholicism in the Low Countries c. 1520–1568	197
Introduction	197
Catechisms and Devotional Works	199
Polemical Works	203
Sermons	205
Conclusion	211
8 Franciscan Missionaries in the North of the Dutch Republic (c. 1600–1680)	213
Introduction	213
Franciscans and the Rise of Protestantism in the Northern Low Countries	216
The Franciscan Mission in the North	219
Franciscan Missionary Reports	224
Conflicts in the Catholic Camp	230
Epilogue	233
Name Index	237
Place and Subject Index	241