

Contents

Abbreviations xviii

Note to the Reader xx

PART I: THE ANXIETY OF RECEPTION

I. THE SENSE OF AN AUDIENCE	3
I. Literacy, The Reading-Public, and Anonymous Criticism	3
II. Authorship and the Public Sphere	13
III. Critics as Judges, Advocates, and Patrons	23
IV. Poetry, Neglect, and the Pursuit of Posthumous Reputation	30
V. The Threat of Modernity: Reading, Consumption, and Overpopulation	39
2. CASE STUDY (1): COLERIDGE	49
I. Coleridge's Search for Sympathy	49
II. Figurations of the Reading-Public	55
III. Public Enemies, Private Friends	61
IV. Models of Reader-Response	66
V. Companionable Forms: Conversation as a Poetic Ideal	72
VI. Reading and Enchantment	75
VII. The Construction of an Ideal Reader	80
VIII. The Rhetoric of Mystery	85
3. CASE STUDY (2): WORDSWORTH	91
I. The Public	91
II. Coterie Audiences	99
III. The Conditions of Understanding: Critical Prose	104
IV. The Implicated Reader: Poems of Dialogue, Witness, and Encounter	109

V. Broken Contracts, Disrupted Continuities: The Lyrical Ballads (1800)	117
VI. Doubles and Shadowy Interpositions: An Epitaphic Theory of Reading	124
4. CASE STUDY (3): ANNA BARBAULD	134
I. Barbauld's Modes of Address	137
II. Interventions and Trespasses	145
III. Enigmas of Identity and Gender	151
IV. Sexual Politics	155
V. The Politics of Sympathy	160
VI. The Reception of Eighteen Hundred and Eleven	164
PART II: CROSSINGS ON THE CREATIVE-CRITICAL DIVIDE
5. COMPETITION AND COLLABORATION IN PERIODICAL CULTURE	173
I. The Question of Secondariness	173
II. Hunt's Dialogic Method	179
III. Poetry-Prose Dialogue and Parody	186
IV. Peacock: The Motives of Equivocation	194
V. Hazlitt and the Defence of Criticism	202
VI. Lamb's Defence of Reading	208
VII. Envy, Irony, and the Rivalry of Genres	215
6. FEMINIZING THE POETICS OF RECEPTION	224
I. Women Writers and the Anxiety of Authorship	224
II. Attending, Listening, Sympathizing, Identifying, and Echoing	232
III. Hannah More and the Efficacy of Conversation	237
IV. Ironic figures of Modesty, Self-Effacement, Anonymity, and Invisibility	242
V. Reading Echo: Barbauld and Jones	248
VI. Echoic Reading and Poetic Identity: Williams, Robinson, Jewsbury, Hemans and Landon	251

7. 'ONE POWER WITH A DOUBLE ASPECT': THE FORMATION OF A SYSTEM OF DEFENCES	263
I. The Past, Posterity, and Original Genius	263
II. Copyright and the Paradox of Romantic Authorship	269
III. The Transcendence of Popularity	272
IV. Posthumous Fame and the Place of Criticism	280
V. Literary Constitutions: Analogues for the Imitation- Originality Debate in Political Discourse	284
VI. Canon-Formation, Connectiveness, and Recuperation	289
8. THE TERROR OF FUTURITY: REPETITION, IDENTIFICATION, AND DOUBLING	298
I. The Temporality of Reading	298
II. The Double Bind of Temporality: Readers as Second Selves	303
III. The Shakespeare-Milton Duality	308
IV. The Defence against Repetition: Applications of a Mixed Hermeneutic	311
V. Women Readers and the Dangers of Sympathetic Identification	317
VI. Gender and the Hierarchy of Genres	322
9. READING ALOUD: AN 'AMBIGUOUS ACCOMPANIMENT'	333
I. 1798: Hazlitt on Preaching, Chanting, and Speaking	333
II. The Orator's Speaking Body: From Sheridan to Thelwall	339
III. The Politics of Reading Aloud	355
IV. Speech-Writing, Prose-Poetry, Public-Private	360
Bibliography	372
Index	391