

CONTENTS.

---

---

CHAP. I.

	Page
Music.—Its original use.—Equally applicable to Speech as to Song.—Distinction between the Music of Song and the Music of Speech. Organs of Speech.—Their Uses, &c. -	1

CHAP. II.

Constituents of all Language—Five Accidents or Properties of Speech.—Accent defined and restored to its original meaning—Causes of Varieties of Accent.—How they become the distinguishing characteristics of peculiar modes of Speech.—The Acute Accent.—The Grave Accent—The Acute and Grave and the Grave and Acute.—Complete and partial Circumflexes or Grace Notes.—Exercises on the Accents - - -	17
--	----

CHAP. III.

Quantity.—Names of the Notes of Quantity. Manner of lengthening Quantities.—Accent and Quantity combined—Exercises	40
--	----

CHAP. IV.

Pauses or Rests.—Grammatical Punctuation.—Rhetorical Punctuation.—The important use of Rhetorical Punctuation.—Examples of Rhetorical Pauses.—Ordinary Time.—
---	--

	Page
Quick Time.—Slow Time.—Interrogation and Exclamation.—The Break or Dash	65
CHAP. V.
Emphasis, what—Organic and Syllabic Emphasis.—How marked on every Syllable	82
CHAP. VI.
Cadence, what—How Cadences are formed by our breathing, the beating of the pulse, and our movement in walking.—Common and Triple cadences	91
CHAP. VII.
Meter, or Measure, what—Common and Triple.—Varieties of Meter.— Two or Three , the divisors of all Meter	95
CHAP. VIII.
Rhythm.—Ancient Rhythm, what—Essentials of all Rhythm.—Rhythm, like Speech, peculiar to man.—Only two modes of it in Nature.—Rhythm inseparable from Speech and Music	100
CHAP. IX.
Various kinds of meter and cadences.—Rhythm, Common and Triple.—Exercises	116
CHAP. X.
Fifth Accident of Language.—Force or Quality of Sound. Swelling or Increasing in Loudness—Decreasing in Loudness.—Loudness uniformly continued	123
CHAP. XI.
Monotone.—No Monotone, musically speaking, exists in Spoken Language.—Errors of Authors concerning Monotone.—Speaking and Singing contrasted.—Remarks on Recitative	142

	Page

CHAP. XII.

Monosyllables.—Their Pliability in Language.—How Syllables differ from one another.—Their Distinctions — FORTY-THREE diversities.—Exercises.—On Political Constitutions. — Family Pride. — Generosity.— Bounty of Nature.—On Religion.—The Accomplished Preacher.—Advantages of High Titles.—The Female Tongue	- - 152
--	---------

CHAP. XIII.

Proper application of Prosodial names of Greek and Latin Feet to English words.—Mode of measuring English Verse with Artificial Prosody, contrasted with the mode of measuring it with Musical Cadences.—Errors of English Prosodians,	- - - 183
--	-----------

CHAP. XIV.

General Rules for Accents inadequate to direct the melody, either of a sentence in prose, or a passage of poetry.—Examples: A sentence from Addison, where Mr Walker's Rule directs only to one accent or inflexion, while the full Melody requires ninety-three accents ,	- - - 222
Three hundred and eighty-eight questions on the foregoing Chapters,	- - 233

CHAP. XV.

Examples on the Five Accidents of Language, exhibiting the Meter, Rhythm, and Melody of various kinds of Verse.	- - 251
Friendship: Set to the Music of Speech ,	- ib.

	Page
The Dream : Set to the Music of Speech,	252
The Slave's Complaint, Ditto, -	255
The Soldier's Dream, Ditto, -	260
The Sound Critic, - - -	264
Beauty, - - - Ditto, -	265
The Contented Miller, - - -	266
Infancy, - - - - -	270
A Thunder Storm, - - - -	271
The Swollen Torrent, - - - -	274
The death of Mozart, - - - -	ib.
The Dying Christian to his Soul : Set to the Music of Speech, - - - -	276
Hohenlinden, an Epic Song, - - -	280
The Passions, an Ode : Set to the Music of Speech, - - - -	284
Alexander's Feast : Set to the Music of Speech,	299
Battle of Waterloo, - - - -	325
The Burial of Sir John Moore, - - -	328
The Lady's Looking-Glass, - - - -	329
Hymn, - - - - -	330
The Rainbow, - - - - -	332
Hymn for the Dead, - - - - -	334
Battle of the Baltic, - - - - -	ib.
Jerusalem, - - - - -	337
The Temple of Jerusalem, - - - -	338
Hymn, - - - - -	339
Meeting of the Waters, - - - -	340
Lines on a Young Lady, - - - -	341
Douglas's Account of himself, - - -	342
Othello's Apology, - - - - -	343
Hamlet's Directions to the Players, -	345
Brutus's Oration on the Death of Cæsar,	346
The Patriot Soldier, - - - - -	347

---