

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abbreviations	11
Introduction	13
I. "WIT'S COMMONWEALTH": ESPRIT DE CORPS AND RIVALRIES	27
1. The Commonwealth of Learning	28
Poetry and the Arts Curriculum – Classification according to the Faculties of the Mind – The Self-Assertion of the Dedicated Poets – Moral Code and Lines of Communication
2. The Coteries	33
2.1 Love Poetry	34
Professional vs Amateur: Contrasting Stances in Love Poetry
2.2 Verse Satires and Epigrams	39
Professional vs Amateur: A Remark on Jonson's Well-Balanced Satirist
2.3 Rival Versions of Sprezzatura	42
Suckling's Attack on Jonson and the Professionals – The Importance of Being a Son of Ben
3. Torchbearers of Civilization	48
Poetry and the Summum Bonum – The Self-Disparagement of the Dedicated Professionals – Preparing the Reader for the Arcanum – The Voice in the Wilderness
4. The Flexibility of the Pastoral Convention	54
Amateur Stances – Pleas for Patronage – Torchbearers of Civilization and Light-Givers to the Shepherd Community
5. The Fringe	58
Would-Be Parnassians – Non-Parnassians and Anti-Parnassians
II. THE SOCIAL ALLEGIANCE OF THE APOLOGISTS	63
1. Orpheus in the artes poeticae and Courtesy Books	63
2. Poets as Cunning Princepleasers: Imitators or Educators of the Court?	65
3. Courtiers and Humanists in Castiglione's Libro del Cortegiano	70
4. Professionals and Amateurs as Defenders of Poetry: The Case of Thomas Lodge and Sir Philip Sidney	74

5.	“To revive myself”: Daniel’s Defence of Poetry in the Musophilus	80
6.	The Hack as Apologist	89
III.	SPENSER’S ‘OLD WOES’ AND THE EPITHALAMIC CONVENTION	93
1.	Spenser’s Breach of Social and Poetic Decorum	93
2.	The Epithalamic Convention and Social Reality	95
3.	The Dream of Beauty and Perfection and the Poet’s Exclusion from it	98
4.	“Prothalamion” as a genus mixtum	102
5.	Poetry and the Court	104
IV.	JONSON AND MULTIPLE PATRONAGE	107
1.	The Stance of Privileged Familiarity	108
2.	Complimentary Verse in an Epistolary Style	111
3.	Jonson’s Advocacy of New Moral Standards in Patronage	114
4.	The Economic Basis of Jonson’s Self-Assertion	117
5.	Daniel and Jonson: Social Aspects of their Contrasting Styles in Self-Representation	118
6.	Multiple Patronage and Jonson’s Stance in The Epigrammes	124
7.	Social Conditions for the Favourable Reception of Jonson’s Verse and Self-Representation	128
V.	PARNASSUS AND ACADEMIC UNEMPLOYMENT: A NOTE	133
1.	The Scholar’s Discontent in the 1590s	133
2.	School Drama and the Ethics of Perseverance	136
3.	Redefinition of the Conflict between the Generations	142
4.	The Students’ Anxiety and the Comforts of Shared Laughter	148
5.	The Crisis and its Bearings on the Status of Professional Authors	153
VI.	ROBERT GREENE, SCAEVOLA OF THE PEN	157
1.	Entertainer of Statesmen	158
2.	Patriot and Promoter of Civic Virtue	160
3.	Repentant Prodigal	161
4.	Scaevola	163
5.	Of Rogues and Authors: The Variety of Stances among Greene’s Predecessors and Writers in Comparable Genres	165
6.	The Compatibility of Greene’s Stances as Entertainer and Scaevola	170
7.	The Scaevola Stance as the ‘Solution’ of Greene’s Role-Conflict	174
8.	Reactions to Greene’s Self-Representation	176

VII. THOMAS NASHE'S VIRTUOSITY 179

1. Militant Literatus 181

2. "Unawares betrayed to infamie" 184

3. Entertaining my Lord Archbishop's Magistri 190

4. Hack and the Careys' Protégé 192

5. Warning Prophet – An Episode 196

6. Gradual Emancipation from the 'Overseers' of Literature 198

7. The Stance of Independence 201

8. Nashe's 'Idiosyncrasy' and Dekker's Defence of the Band of Castalian Pen-Men 207

Epilogue 211

Notes 219

Bibliography 269

Index 293