

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction: Dramatising Britain – Nation, Fantasy and the London Stage, 1719–1745	1
Historicising identities and staging the nation's histories	5
Instability and fantasy: the politics of theatre	9
Prohibiting the nation's commentator	12
1 Ancient Britons and Liberty	18
The nation's ancient liberty	22
National identity	33
Parliament as the protector of liberty	42
2 Kings, Ministers and Favourites: the National Myth in Peril	48
Favouritism and patriotism	50
The favourite and the sovereign	56
Representations of Walpole in The Fall of Mortimer (1731) and The Fall of the Earl of Essex (1731)	65
The fall of the favourite	76
3 Shakespeare, the National Scaffold	78
Jacobite incursions and dramatic interventions	81
Homogenising a nation of difference	87
Patriot women, validating the myth	91
Shakespearean patriot heroines as idealised Britons	104
4 Britain, Empire and Julius Caesar	108
Julius Caesar rewritten	112
Caesar and the patriot fantasy	119
Rewriting patriotism: a model for British colonialism?	129
Protestant Britain: validating colonial fantasy	135

5	Turks, Christians and Imperial Fantasy	142
	Rewriting the demon Turk	145
	Liberty and consent	152
	How to govern an empire: Briton turn'd Turk?	158
	Turk turn'd Christian: authorising Protestant colonialism	167
	Penitent Turks/libidinous Christians	173
	Conclusion: History, Fantasy and the Staging of Britishness	180
	Histories of Britishness	182
	Staging Britishness	184
	Modern fantasies	187
	Notes	189
	Bibliography	212
	Index	220