

Contents

Foreword: Cultural politics	page vii
Preface	ix
PART ONE Access for women
1 'Released into language': the study of language outside and inside academic institutions Deborah Cameron	5
2 Women returning to study Elaine Hobby	15
3 Biting the teacher's apple: opening doors for women in higher education Susan Sellers	23
PART TWO Valuing women's experience
4 Subjects in English: autobiography, women and education Maggie Humm	39
5 Too personal a response? Women's collaborative reading Moira Monteith	50
6 'Why hath this Lady writ her own Life?': studying early female autobiography Louise Stewart and Helen Wilcox	61
PART THREE A course of our own
7 Painting the lion: feminist options Lesley Jeffries, Lesley Johnson, Vivien Jones, Lynette Hunter and Margaret Reynolds	75
8 Teaching women's writing and feminist theory: diary of a two-term seminar Isobel Armstrong	88
9 Powerhouse or ivory tower?: feminism and postgraduate English Patsy Stoneman	96
PART FOUR Women and the male canon
10 Learning to 'read as a woman' Su Reid	113
11 Male texts and their place in the 'A' level curriculum Ann Hancock	123
12 Feminist teaching and masculine modes: Paradise regained as an instance Elspeth Graham	132

PART FIVE Beyond the boundaries of 'English'

13	With her in Ourland: a feminist teaches nineteenth-century American literature	Alison Easton	149
14	Beyond the canon: Harriet Martineau's Deerbrook	Gabriele Griffin	161
15	Occupying the empty space: feminism and drama	Susanne Greenhalgh	170
16	Influence of a teacher	Margaret Beetham	180
	Afterword	Penny Florence	190
	Notes on contributors		200
	Bibliography		204
	Index		207