

Contents

List of figures	page
Acknowledgements	viii
	x
PART I AUSTRALIAN ENGLISH STUDIES
1 Introduction	3
A brief look at the social context	3
Social class	4
Gender	5
Ethnicity	5
The organization of this book	6
2 A critical overview of previous studies of Australian English	8
Studies of AE	9
Phonetic descriptions of the main differentiators of AE	13
The vowel variants	13
Consonant variants	15
Intonation	17
Variation in AE	17
The social evaluation of AE	21
Migrants and Aborigines and AE	24
3 A sociolinguistic reconstruction of Australian English	25
The origins of AE	29
The historical setting of AE	32
Historical sketch (1788–1890s)	32
The social context of AE	33
The sociolinguistic reconstruction of AE	36
PART II THE SYDNEY SOCIAL DIALECT SURVEY
4 The Sydney Social Dialect Survey	43
The sample	43
The social variables	44
Socioeconomic class	45
Age	47
Gender	48

	Ethnicity	48
	The sociolinguistic questionnaire	50
	The linguistic variables	51
5	Analytical methodology	52
	Principal components analysis	53
	Conceptually defined	53
	Operationally defined	55
	Variable rule analysis	59
	Conceptually defined	59
	Operationally defined	60
	A comparison of the two techniques	62
	Further justification for principal components analysis	65
6	Vowel variation in Sydney	67
	Description of the vowel variables	68
	Principal components analysis of the vowel variables	69
	The Sydney speech community: core and periphery	70
	The peripheral speech community	71
	The core speech community	75
	The ethnic groups considered separately	80
	Gender	81
	Socioeconomic class	82
	Age	83
	Exploring the possibility of language change	86
	Variable rule analysis	86
	The direction of change	89
	Anglos	91
	Italians	91
	Greeks	93
7	Consonant variation in Sydney	96
	The six consonantal variables	96
	The variables (θ), (h), (-ing) and (t)	98
	The (θ) variable	102
	The (h) variable	102
	The (-ing) variable	102
	The (t) variable	103
	The variation of postvocalic (r)	104
	Palatalization of /t, d, s, z/	109
8	High Rising Tone: variation in intonation	118
	The analysis	120
	Overall results	121
	Text type	121
	Length of turn	122
	The social distribution of HRT	122
	HRT: language change in progress?	123

	Historical evidence	124
	Implicational patterning	124
	Social patterning	125
	Explorations into the meaning of HRT	126
9	Variation in text: the primary school descriptions	133
	Introduction	133
	Problems facing quantitative text analysis	133
	Data preparation	136
	Coding the question types	137
	Delimiting the text	137
	Selecting the text variables	139
	Quantitative analysis	142
	Results of quantitative analysis	142
	Social characteristics and text types	145
	Dialogic vs. monologic texts	146
	Discussion	147
	The New York study and the Sydney study compared	147
	Quantitative analysis of texts	148
	Naming the principal components	150
PART III AN INTEGRATED VIEW OF DIALECTS
10	An integrated description of dialectal variation	153
	The 'dialect' data file	155
	Interpreting the principal components	155
	Examining the speaker groups	159
	Linguistic description of the dialect groups	163
	Continuum 1	163
	Continuum 2	163
	Sharp vs. gradient stratification	165
	Social description of the dialect groups	165
	Exploring the significance of the new groups	167
	Further analysis of PC 4	169
	Summary	171
11	Conclusions	174
	AE studies	174
	Variationist studies in general	177
	Appendix A. The questionnaire	181
	Appendix B. Examples of school descriptions	186
	Bibliography	190
	Index	197