

Contents

Preface	ix
The Canadian Short Story: Status, Criticism, Historical Survey Reingard M. Nischik	1
1: Canadian Animal Stories: Charles G. D. Roberts, “Do Seek Their Meat from God” (1892) Martina Seifert	41
2: Tory Humanism, Ironic Humor, and Satire: Stephen Leacock, “The Marine Excursion of the Knights of Pythias” (1912) Heinz Antor	53
3: The Beginnings of Canadian Modernism: Raymond Knister, “The First Day of Spring” (written 1924/25) Julia Breitbach	67
4: From Old World Aestheticist Immoralist to Prairie Moral Realist: Frederick Philip Grove, “Snow” (1926/1932) Konrad Groß	83
5: Psychological Realism, Immigration, and City Fiction: Morley Callaghan, “Last Spring They Came Over” (1927) Paul Goetsch	95
6: Modernism, Prairie Fiction, and Gender: Sinclair Ross, “The Lamp at Noon” (1938) Dieter Meindl	105
7: “An Artful Artlessness”: Ethel Wilson, “We Have to Sit Opposite” (1945) Nina Kück	117
8: Social Realism and Compassion for the Underdog: Hugh Garner, “One-Two-Three Little Indians” (1950) Stefan Ferguson	129

- 9: The Perils of Human Relationships: Joyce Marshall,
“The Old Woman” (1952) 141
Rudolf Bader
- 10: The Social Critic at Work: Mordecai Richler, “Benny,
the War in Europe, and Myerson’s Daughter Bella” (1956) 149
Fabienne C. Quennet
- 11: Myth and the Postmodernist Turn in Canadian Short Fiction:
Sheila Watson, “Antigone” (1959) 163
Martin Kuester
- 12: The Modernist Aesthetic: Hugh Hood,
“Flying a Red Kite” (1962) 175
Jutta Zimmermann
- 13: Doing Well in the International Thing?: Mavis Gallant,
“The Ice Wagon Going Down the Street” (1963) 191
Silvia Mergenthal
- 14: (Un-)Doing Gender: Alice Munro, “Boys and Girls” (1964) 203
Reingard M. Nischik
- 15: Collective Memory and Personal Identity in the Prairie
Town of Manawaka: Margaret Laurence,
“The Loons” (1966) 219
Caroline Rosenthal
- 16: “Out of Place”: Clark Blaise, “A Class of New Canadians” (1970) 233
Wolfgang Kloöß
- 17: Realism and Parodic Postmodernism: Audrey
Thomas, “Aquarius” (1971) 247
Lothar Hönnighausen
- 18: “The Problem Is to Make the Story”: Rudy Wiebe,
“Where Is the Voice Coming from?” (1971) 261
Heinz Ickstadt
- 19: The Canadian Writer as Expatriate: Norman Levine,
“We All Begin in a Little Magazine” (1972) 271
Gordon Bölling
- 20: Canadian Artist Stories: John Metcalf, “The Strange
Aberration of Mr. Ken Smythe” (1973) 283
Reingard M. Nischik

21: "A Literature of a Whole World and of a Real World": Jane Rule, "Lilian" (1977) Christina Strobel	299
22: Failure as Liberation: Jack Hodgins, "The Concert Stages of Europe" (1978) Waldemar Zacharasiewicz	313
23: Figures in a Landscape: William Dempsey Valgardson, "A Matter of Balance" (1982) Maria and Martin Löschnigg	321
24: "The Translation of the World into Words" and the Female Tradition: Margaret Atwood, "Significant Moments in the Life of My Mother" (1983) Reingard M. Nischik	331
25: "Southern Preacher": Leon Rooke, "The Woman Who Talked to Horses" (1984) Nadja Gernalzick	341
26: Nativeness as Third Space: Thomas King, "Borders" (1991) Eva Gruber	353
27: Digressing to Inner Worlds: Carol Shields, "Our Men and Women" (1999) Brigitte Glaser	365
28: A Sentimental Journey: Janice Kulyk Keefer, "Dreams:Storms:Dogs" (1999) Georgiana Banita	375
Further Reading on the Canadian Short Story	387
Time Chart: The Short Story in the USA, Canada, and Great Britain	389
Notes on the Contributors	399
Index	405