

Contents

Author's Preface and Acknowledgements	page v
Preface to the Second Edition	vii
Introduction	3
PART I. LIFE WITHOUT FICTION
I. Popular Education in the West Indies in the Nineteenth Century	19
II. The Whites and Cultural Absenteeism	32
III. The Coloureds and Class Interest	39
The Fictional Image of the Mulatto	40
IV. New Bearings	51
(i) Thomas Henry MacDermot (1870-1933): 'Tom Redcam'	51
(ii) H. G. de Lisser (1878-1944)	55
V. The Drift Towards the Audience	63
PART II. APPROACHES
VI. The Language of the Master?	77
(i) Terranglia	77
(ii) First Language or Second Language	78
(iii) English in the West Indies: 'Bad English'	82
(iv) 'Negro English' in British Fiction of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries	87
(v) The Contemporary Linguistic Situation	90
(vi) Dialect in West Indian Fiction	96
VII. The Negro	115
(i) Neo-African Literature—Neo-African Culture	115

Contents

(ii) African Cultural Survivals in West Indian Fiction: Secular	page 118
(iii) Obeah and Cult Practices in West Indian Fiction	123
(iv) Devaluation and the Response	131
(v) The West Indian Interest in Africa (Literary)	135
VIII. Aborigines	164
IX. The Commonwealth Approach	175
X. The Achievement of Roger Mais	179
XI. The World of 'A House for Mr. Biswas'	189
XII. Novels of Childhood	205
XIII. Terrified Consciousness	223
PART III. PRECURSOR
XIV. The Road to 'Banana Bottom'	239
(i) Precursors	239
(ii) Claude McKay: Life and Poetry	241
(iii) The Novels of Claude McKay	247
Author Bibliography	274
Year by Year Bibliography	292
Secondary Bibliography	303
Index	307