

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	xiii
1. INTRODUCTION: THE THEORY OF ORGANIC MEMORY
Memory and Heredity	I
Faith in Biochemistry	10
The Continuum	18
The Promise of Immortality	25
Analogy and Power	27
Contemporary Objections	34
Consequences	38
2. HEREDITY AND MEMORY IN THE INDIVIDUAL: THE ROLE OF PATHOLOGY
Metaphor As a Solution	41
Theories of Heredity: Darwin, Haeckel, Weismann	43
Theories of Degeneration: Morel, Lombroso, Nordau	49
Zola's Tainted Tree	53
The Fortune of the Rougon (1870)	61
L'Assommoir (1877)	63
Nana (1880)	64
Germinal (1885)	66
La Bête humaine (1890)	69
Doctor Pascal (1893)	73
Baroja: Pathology and Race	75
The House of Aizgorri (1900)	83
The Way of Perfection (1902)	84
The Tree of Science (1911)	87

3. CULTURE AS ORGANIC MEMORY
The Cultural Inheritance	93
Lazarus and Steinthal: The First Völkerpsychologie	97
Wilhelm Wundt: Völkerpsychologie and Physiological Psychology	107
Thomas Mann: An Ironic Treatment of Cultural and Racial Inheritance	112
Buddenbrooks (1901)	115
Tonio Kröger (1903)	120
The Blood of the Walsungs (1905)	123
Reflections of a Nonpolitical Man (1918)	126
Miguel de Unamuno: Viewing History through the Present Culture	128
On Casticismo (1895, 1902)	130
Peace in War (1897)	132
4. ORGANIC MEMORY AS HERMENEUTICS: READING HISTORY
The Shipwreck and the Soup	137
Emilia Pardo Bazán: “Matter Is Indifferent to Its Forms”	139
Pascual López: Autobiography of a Medical Student (1879)	146
The House of Ulloa (1886)	149
Mother Nature (1887)	154
Thomas Hardy: The Inaccessibility of History	158
Tess of the d’Urbervilles (1891)	162
The Well-Beloved (1897)	173
Jude the Obscure (1895)	176
5. PSYCHOANALYSIS: READING AS A SCIENCE
Freud: The Past and Its Readers	181
Jung: Organic Memory As a Universal Language	205
6. CONCLUSION
Notes	221
Bibliography	269
Index	287