

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements.....	7
Introduction.....	9
Part One: Establishing Fictional Facts.....	27
1.1 Bending Facts in Unreliable Narration	27
1.1.1 Potential Textual Signals of Unreliable Narration	49
1.1.2 Types of Unreliable Narration.....	59
1.2 Delineating the Borders of Unreliable Narration: Possible-World Theory and World-Constructing Homodiegetic Narrators	65
1.3 Relevant Philosophical, Psychoanalytical, and Psychological Theories and Concepts.....	78
Part Two: The Retold and Relived Identities of Kazuo Ishiguro's Narrators.....	89
2.1 The Distorted Self-Portrait: Unreliable Narration in An Artist of the Floating World	89
2.2 The Contagious Wound: Unnatural Narration in The Unconsoled	112
2.3 The Dream Come (Almost) True: Unreliable and Unnatural Narration in When We Were Orphans	127
Part Three: The Invented Identities of Max Frisch's Narrators in Comparative Perspective	153
3.1 The Guided Coincidence: Unreliable Narration in Homo faber	153
3.1.1 Homo faber and Ishiguro's novels.....	178
3.2 The Man without a Past: Two Levels of Potential Narrative Unreliability in Stiller	182

3.2.1 Stiller and Ishiguro's novels.....	212
3.3 The Search for a Story: The Narration of Possibilities in Mein Name sei Gantenbein	214
3.3.1 Gantenbein and Ishiguro's Novels.....	241
Conclusion	245
Works Cited	253