

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
Part I American Modernism, Race, and National Culture	29
1. Pragmatism and Americanism	33
2. The Americanization of "Race" and "Culture"	62
3. Cultural Pluralism and National Identity	78
4. Cultural Nationalism and the Lyrical Left	94
Part II The Transformation of Literary Institutions	125
5. The Crisis and the Nation's Conscience	137
6. Toward a New Negro Aesthetic	170
7. Reading These United States: The Nation and The New Republic	209
8. The Native Arts of Radicalism and/or Race	250
9. V. F. Calverton, The Modern Quarterly , and an Anthology	278
10. Mediating Race and Nation: The Cultural Politics of The Messenger	289
11. "Superior Intellectual Vaudeville": American Mercury	313
12. Black Writing and Modernist American Publishing	342

Part III	Producing The New Negro	387
	13. Staging a Renaissance	389
	14. The New Negro : An Interpretation	396
Epilogue		435
Notes		451
Index		533