

CONTENTS

Preface	xiii
I PERSICA POSTALEXANDRICA	1
1. The Seleucid Empire	1
a. The division of Alexander's heritage	1
b. The decay of the Seleucid Empire	2
2. The Parthian Empire	4
a. 'The frontier of Europe'	4
b. A head brought to the king	5
c. A delicate balance	6
d. Trajan retraces Alexander's footsteps	8
3. The Sasanian Empire	10
a. The Persian renaissance	10
b. A Roman emperor down on his knees	12
c. A brother kept at bay	14
d. The last apogee of Sasanian power	16
4. Orthodox Zoroastrianism: a recapitulation	18
5. The Zervanite heresy	21
a. What about 'Ormuzd and Ahriman'?	21
b. The Zervanite myth	22
c. Finite and infinite deities	25
d. The Magians	26
e. The role of the Magi in the history of Zoroastrianism	28
f. Zervanism under the Sasanian emperors	29
6. Mandaicism and Manichaeism	30
a. Mandaicism	31
b. Manichaeism	32
7. A mosaic of religions	33
Appendix to Chapter I: on Mazdakism	35
Notes to Chapter I	37
II INDICA	40
1. India between particularism and the drive to unity	40
a. India from the inside and from the outside	40
b. Prehistoric man and nature	41
c. The Indus civilization	42
d. The coming of the Aryans	45
2. The first power centre	48
a. The Vedic period	48
b. Magadha's bid for power	50

3.	Persians and Greeks in India	53
	a. Persian influence	53
	b. Alexander beyond the Indus	54
4.	The Mauryan Empire	55
	a. The foundation of the empire	55
	b. Chandragupta's power test	57
	c. Asoka	58
	d. The Bactrian menace	60
5.	Nomad incursions	62
6.	Particularism or unity	64
7.	The Gupta dynasty	66
8.	The Harappa culture	69
9.	The Aryans, their kings, and the conquered peoples	71
10.	The emperors	73
11.	Empire and unity	75
12.	The three great Indian concepts	76
	a. Dharma	77
	b. Samsara	78
	c. Karman	79
13.	Slavery as a divisive element	80
	a. A Greek observer	80
	b. Who became slaves	81
	c. Utterly different	82
14.	Women as the lesser sort	83
	a. Harappan matriarchate	83
	b. The 'macho' Aryans	83
	c. The greater importance of the sons	84
	d. Polygamy	86
	e. The sad fate of the widow	88
	f. Child marriages	90
	g. The dualistic relationship of women and women	92
	h. Buddhist attitudes to the female sex	93
15.	The caste system and the lesser breeds	95
	a. The word 'caste'	96
	b. The origin of the caste system	96
	c. What is a caste?	97
	d. The castes and the varnas	98
	e. Outcastes and pariahs	99
	f. Mutual exclusivity	100
	g. The Shudras	101
	h. Conclusion	104
16.	Dualistic tendencies in Indian philosophy	104
	a. The Indian conception of existence	105
	b. Unity and diversity	106
	c. Male and Female	107
	d. Matter and Spirit	108

17.	Dualistic tendencies in Indian mythology	109
	a. Vedic devas	109
	b. Rifts and fissures in the Vedic pantheon	111
	c. Demons	112
18.	The Brahmanic religion	113
	a. The difference between Vedism and Brahmanism	113
	b. Brahma, Brahmanas, and Brahmins	114
	c. Brahma(n) as the highest principle	115
	d. The Brahmanic idea of unity in the cosmos	116
	e. Theism and pantheism	118
	f. The importance of ritual	119
19.	The superiority of the Brahmins	121
	a. The Brahmins as sacrificial experts	121
	b. The purohita	122
	c. Brahmanic wealth	123
	d. A highly privileged class	125
20.	Dualistic tendencies in Hinduism	126
	a. Vishnu and Krishna	126
	b. Contradictory statements about women	128
	c. The Hindu mother cult	128
	d. Mother-Goddesses	129
	e. The come back of the female divinities	130
	f. The dual(istic) character of Maha-Devi	131
	g. The Linga and the Yoni: an uneasy balance	132
21.	Yoga dualism	136
	a. The way of the atman	136
	b. The 'via negativa'	137
	c. What is yoga?	138
	d. Yoga's philosophical background	139
	e. Yoga practice	141
22.	Jainism	143
	a. The founder, Vardhamana	143
	b. Jainism's relation to the Parshva creed	143
	c. The annihilation of karma	145
	d. The arduous road upwards	147
	e. Jainism to-day	148
23.	Buddhism	149
	a. The life of the Buddha	149
	b. The corpus of Buddhist scripture	151
	c. The spread of Buddhism	151
	d. Buddhism a 'non-theistic religion'?	153
	e. The road to Nirvana	155
	f. The Lesser Vehicle	157
	g. The Great Vehicle	158
24.	Looking back	160
	Notes to Chapter II	163

III	SINENSIA	174
1.	The cradle of Chinese civilization	174
2.	Times of legend	175
3.	The Shang dynasty	176
4.	Zhou rule	178
5.	The Eastern Zhou	180
	a. The position of the ruler	180
	b. Chinese imperialism	181
	c. The ruler and his vassals	183
6.	Qin, the first unified Chinese empire	185
	a. Qin and China	185
	b. The foundation of the Chinese empire	186
	c. The promotion of national unity	187
	d. Qin authoritarianism	188
7.	The foundation of Han rule	190
8.	Some thoughts on the unification of China and on history writing	191
9.	Early problems of the Han regime	195
	a. The initial situation	195
	b. Modernists and reformists	196
	c. The beginnings of Chinese bureaucracy	197
10.	The showdown with the Xiongnu	199
11.	The Son of Heaven and his Celestial Mandate	202
12.	The unhappy end of the First Han Period	203
13.	The Latter Han Period	204
14.	A time of disunion	206
15.	Chinese philosophical concepts	210
	a. A universe in three parts	210
	b. Heaven as the supreme godhead	210
	c. The square earth	211
	d. Pairs of oppositions	212
	e. Yin and Yang	215
16.	The life of Master Kong	217
17.	Not a religious reformer	219
18.	Confucius the humanist	220
19.	Confucians and Legalists	222
20.	The Qin and Han emperors and Confucianism	223
21.	Confucian education	225
22.	Mohist pessimism	225
	a. Mo's puritanism	225
	b. Mo's concept of universal love	226
	c. Mohism and Confucianism at loggerheads	228
23.	Mengzi's optimism	229
24.	One of the Hundred Schools	230
25.	Dao, the Way	232
	a. What is Dao?	232

b. About Laozi	233
c. Dao, what it means	234
d. Once again, the One and the Many	235
e. The gods of Daoism	237
f. A doctrine of salvation	238
g. Daoist practices	239
h. The Daoist 'Church'	242
26. A final overview	243
Notes to Chapter III	244
 Bibliography	 251
General Index	260

Time Table of Indian history	43
------------------------------	----

Map I	The Seleucid Empire	opposite p.	2
Map II	The Parthian Empire	opposite p.	4
Map III	The Sasanian Empire	opposite p.	10
Map IV	The Indus Civilization	opposite p.	42
Map V	The Vedic Period	opposite p.	48
Map VI	The Empire of Magadha	opposite p.	51
Map VII	The Mauryan Empire under Asoka	opposite p.	56
Map VIII	The Gupta Empire	opposite p.	68
Map IX	The Shang and Zhou realms	opposite p.	176
Map X	The Qin Empire	opposite p.	186
Map XI	The Han Empire	opposite p.	200