

Contents

Series preface	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xvii
PART I: INTRODUCTION TO EATING DISORDERS	1
1 The nature of eating disorders	3
Anorexia nervosa—Bulimia nervosa—Partial syndromes and the spectrum of eating disorders—Obesity—Epidemiology—Aetiology
2 Treatment of eating disorders	19
The Treatment of anorexia nervosa—Treatment of bulimia nervosa—Summary
PART II: A PERSONAL CONSTRUCT APPROACH TO EATING DISORDERS	29
3 The psychology of personal constructs	31
First basic assumption—Second basic assumption—Corollaries of personal construct theory—Emotional experience—Cycles and processes of construction

viii Contents

4	The exploration of personal constructs	49
	Elicitation of constructs—Repertory grid technique—Grids for investigating eating disorders—Self-characterisation—Alternative ways of exploring constructs
5	A personal construct approach to therapy and change	69
	Personal construct therapy—A personal construct approach to eating disorders
6	Personal construct research on eating disorders	90
	Recent grid data—Summary
PART III: THE EXPERIENCE OF PERSONAL CONSTRUCT THERAPY: SOME THERAPEUTIC STORIES		101
Introduction		103
7	Anna	106
	Change in construing and treatment—A retrospective construction of the process of change—Postscript
8	Jenny	122
	Treatment
9	Angela	129
	Treatment—Post-treatment assessment—Follow-up—Concluding comment
10	Helen	146
	Construct elicitation—Grid analysis—Treatment—Follow-up grid—Concluding comment
11	Sonia	158
	Construct elicitation—Treatment—Follow-up

12 Kath	169
Construct elicitation—Treatment—Overview—Postscript
13 Sally	182
Construct elicitation—Treatment—Summary
14 Christine	193
The background—Construct elicitation—Initial SELF-GRID— Setting up a psychotherapeutic relationship—The first phase of treatment—Going beyond food and weight—Concluding comment
PART IV: ISSUES AND FUTURE DIRECTIONS	207
15 Issues and future directions	209
Making sense of eating disorders—The prospect for change— Therapeutic issues—Gender issues—Relationship with other applications of personal construct psychology—Personal reflections and anticipations
References	229
Author index	239
Subject index	243