Introduction to the second edition	Page vii
I. "To study the craft, to follow the process, to read constructively." (PERCY LUBBOCK)	Page i
II. "The world, the temporal world, rests on a few very simple ideas. . . . It rests notably, amongst others, on the idea of Fidelity." (JOSEPH CONRAD)	Page 15
III. "My task which I am trying to achieve is, by the power of the written word to make you hear, to make you feel—it is, before all, to make you see." (JOSEPH CONRAD)	Page 34
IV. "I should like to confess my surprise on finding that notwithstanding all its apparatus of analysis the story consists for the most part of physical impressions." (JOSEPH CONRAD)	Page 63
V. "As to the story itself, it is true enough in its essentials. The sustained invention of a really telling lie demands a talent which I do not possess." (JOSEPH CONRAD)	Page 88
VI. "The way to do a thing that shall make it undergo most doing." (HENRY JAMES)	Page 120
VII. "He sought the paragraph, and afterwards the page, and after the page the chapter. And the chapter was sought in relation to the book: the book was always in his mind . . ." (GEORGE MOORE)	Page 167
VIII. "It must strenuously aspire to the plasticity of sculpture, to the colour of painting, and to the magic suggestiveness of music—which is the art of arts." (JOSEPH CONRAD)	Page 216
IX. The End	Page 245
