

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
1. Theater and the Scene of Vision	12
Chekhov's Camera: The Rhetoric of Stage Realism	12
Invisible Women: Problem Drama, 1890–1920	29
2. Actors and Objects	54
Invisible Actors: O'Neill, the Method, and the Masks of "Character"	54
Visible Scenes: American Realism and the Absent Audience	70
Empty Spaces and the Power of Privacy: Pinter, Shepard, and Bond	81
3. Scripted Bodies: Poetic Theater	99
Poetic Theater and the Work of Acting	99
The Discipline of Speech: Yeats's Dance Drama	108
The Discipline of Performance: The Dance of Death and Murder in the Cathedral	119
The Discipline of the Text: Beckett's Theater	131

4. Political Theater: Staging the Spectator	143
Transforming the Field of Theater	143
Breaking the Frame of History: Hitler Dances and The Churchill Play	158
History and the Frame of Genre: Laughter! and Poppy	169
Framing Gender: Cloud Nine and Fefu and Her Friends	181
Postscript Sidi's Image: Theater and the Frame of Culture	194
Works Cited	205
Index	221