

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	VII
List of Contributors	IX
Editors' foreword	XV
Corpora, grammar, and discourse analysis: Recent trends, current challenges Nicholas Groom, Maggie Charles and Suganthi John	1
Chapter 1. Pattern grammar and transitivity analysis Geoff Thompson	21
Chapter 2. Using COBUILD grammar patterns for a large-scale analysis of verb-argument constructions: Exploring corpus data and speaker knowledge Ute Römer, Matthew B. O'Donnell and Nick C. Ellis	43
Chapter 3. "Hugh's across all that": Some changing uses of prepositions Gill Francis	73
Chapter 4. The textual functions of lexis Michael Stubbs	97
Chapter 5. Examining associations between lexis and textual position in hard news stories, or according to a study by... Michael Hoey and Matthew Brook O'Donnell	117
Chapter 6. I mean I only really wanted to dry me towels because ...: Organisational frameworks across modes, registers, and genres Martin Warren	145
Chapter 7. Probably most important of all: Importance markers in academic and popular history articles Marina Bondi	161
Chapter 8. Chatting in the academy: Informality in spoken academic discourse Paula Buttery, Michael McCarthy and Ronald Carter	183

Chapter 9. General extenders in learner language	211
Karin Aijmer
Chapter 10. Language description and language learning: The pedagogic corpus and learners as researchers	235
Dave and Jane Willis
Chapter 11. “What we contrarians already know”: Individual and communal aspects of attitudinal identity	257
Monika Bednarek
Chapter 12. Does Britain need any more foreign doctors? Inter-analyst consistency and corpus-assisted (critical) discourse analysis	283
Paul Baker
Publications by Susan Hunston	301
Author Index	305
Subject Index	309