

CONTENTS

Note on the text	xi
Introduction	1
1. Preserving the Faith	7
1. The 'Sturdy Prejudice' of Eighteenth-century Orthodoxy	7
2. Faith as a 'Rational Assent'	17
3. Free-thinking and 'Scoffers' at Religion	28
2. The Decline of Natural Religion	38
1. 'True' Deism: The Ambiguity of Apologetics	38
2. The Being and Attributes of God	48
3. Charity as a Virtue Exclusive to Christianity	58
3. New Trends in Ethics	66
1. Johnson's Moral Doctrine: 'Christian Epicureanism'	66
2. Free Will	85
4. Suffering and the Universal Order	100
1. The Correspondence between Vice and Suffering	100
2. 'Universal Optimism' and Divine Government	112
3. Stoicism and Christian Patience	123
5. Pride and the Pursuit of Applause	129
1. Virtue as a Deceitful Contrivance of Pride	129
2. The Regulation of the Love of Fame and Applause	138
3. Social Custom and Immutable Truth	147
4. Johnson's New Standard of Human Greatness	155
6. Christian Charity in Theory and Practice	161
1. The Christian Theory of Charity	161
2. The Importance of Charity to Salvation	171

3. Eighteenth-century Arguments against Charity	174
4. Johnson and Legal Reform: Debtors and Capital Punishment	181
7. Doctrinal Controversy	190
1. The Idea of Christian Perfection	190
2. The Doctrines of Original Sin, Grace, and Repentance	203
3. The Christian Ordinances: The Form and the Power of Godliness	215
8. The Case against Religious Liberty	223
1. The Utility of an Established Church	223
2. Public Order and the Spirit of Enquiry	228
3. 'Hoadly's Paradox' and Sincerity of Private Judgement	238
4. The Conservative Idea of Political Change	247
Bibliography	253
Index	267