

CONTENTS

Introduction
Credits
Contributors

PART I. THE POET IN HIS TIME . . .	1
Speaking Pictures: Sidney's Rapprochement between Poetry and Painting, by S.K. Heninger, Jr	3
The Meeting of the Muses: Sidney and the Mid-Tudor Poets, by Germaine Warkentin	17
Divided Aims in the Revised Arcadia , by Maurice Evans	34
Astrophil's Stella and Stella's Astrophil, by Robert L. Montgomery	44
Sidneian Indirection: The Ethical Irony of Astrophil and Stella , by Charles S. Levy	56
PART II . . . AND IN OURS	67
The Rewriting of Petrarch: Sidney and the Languages of Sixteenth-Century Poetry, by Gary F. Waller	69
Unending Desire: Sidney's Reinvention of Petrarchan Form in Astrophil and Stella , by Marion Campbell	84
'What May Words Say': The Limits of Language in Astrophil and Stella , by Jacqueline T. Miller	95

Contents

Sidney's Presence in Lyric Verse of the Later English Renaissance, by Jon A. Quitslund	110
The Cultural Politics of the Defence of Poetry , by Alan Sinfield	124
INDEX	145