

Table of contents

Transcription conventions in the experimental data .....	x <sup>i</sup>
Preface .....	x <sup>iii</sup>
Introduction .....	x <sup>v</sup>
CHAPTER 1
Preliminaries .....	1
1.1 The cognitive-pragmatic perspective .....	1
1.2 The core issues: Depth and dynamism .....	5
1.3 Epistemic modality: A paradigmatic approach .....	21
1.4 Other functional factors in the analysis: A preview .....	32
1.5 Data types and languages .....	45
1.6 Practical details about the data and their analyses .....	49
CHAPTER 2
Modal adverbs and adjectives .....	55
2.1 Some lexical-semantic and grammatical properties .....	55
2.2 Evidentiality .....	64
2.3 Performativity .....	72
2.4 Information structure .....	79
2.5 Discourse strategy .....	100
2.6 Summing up .....	102
CHAPTER 3
Mental state predicates .....	107
3.1 Some lexical-semantic and grammatical properties .....	107
3.2 Evidentiality .....	122
3.3 Performativity .....	129

3.4 Information structure . . . . .	137
3.5 Discourse strategy . . . . .	162
3.6 Summing up . . . . .	167

CHAPTER 4

Modal auxiliaries . . . . .	171
4.1 Some lexical-semantic and grammatical properties . . . . .	171
4.2 Evidentiality . . . . .	205
4.3 Performativity . . . . .	208
4.4 Information structure . . . . .	213
4.5 Discourse strategy . . . . .	224
4.6 Summing up . . . . .	227
4.7 Postscript: The diachrony of the Dutch modals . . . . .	228

CHAPTER 5

Information structure: An experiment . . . . .	235
5.1 Aim . . . . .	235
5.2 Method, subjects . . . . .	236
5.3 Data selection and general information . . . . .	239
5.4 Results and analysis . . . . .	243
5.5 Summing up . . . . .	259

CHAPTER 6

The cognitive structure of epistemic modality . . . . .	261
6.1 The syntax of epistemic expressions: Structure shaped by multiple functions . . . . .	261
6.2 Language production: A blueprint . . . . .	272
6.3 Qualifications and layered representations in functional linguistics	279
6.4 The epistemic paradigm and the nature of conceptual representation . . . . .	287
6.4.1 The argument for non-linguistic conceptualization . . . . .	287
6.4.2 Further thoughts on modeling conceptualization . . . . .	294
6.5 Epistemic modality and layering in language production . . . . .	304
6.5.1 Models of layering and the linguistic vs. conceptual divide	305
6.5.2 ‘Layering’ and linguistic structure . . . . .	315
6.5.3 The position of information structure . . . . .	319

6.5.4	The status of strategic uses . . . . .	325
6.5.5	The nature of processing epistemic expressions . . . . .	326
6.5.6	Cognition vs. typology? . . . . .	332
6.6	Principles of layering in conceptualization . . . . .	334
6.6.1	The gradualness of qualificational scope relations . . . . .	334
6.6.2	Stacks in layering and the status of interaction . . . . .	348
6.6.3	The rationale behind the layered system . . . . .	353
6.6.4	Commitment and control . . . . .	357
6.6.5	Conceptual relativity . . . . .	364
Conclusion	. . . . .	367
References	. . . . .	369
Appendix 1:	Cartoon strips and their experimental conditions . . . . .	383
Appendix 2:	Qualificational expressions in the experimental data . . . . .	388
Subject index	. . . . .	391
Name index	. . . . .	421
Word index	. . . . .	425