

{ CONTENTS }

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: Literary History as the History of “Literature”	3
Scholarly Supports for This Study	7
Literature as Modern and Antimodern	12
How This Study Proceeds	16
1. Organizing Literature	20
Looking for Literature in the Eighteenth Century	21
The Problem with Poetry	24
Phillis Wheatley and the Transformation of Poetry	29
The Genres of Literature	36
The Two Canons	43
2. Literature, Civil Society, and the State	53
Print, Aesthetic Autonomy, and the History of Censorship	54
Literature in the Marketplace	63
3. Studying Literature	71
Shakespeare, Modern and Antimodern	74
Where Shakespeare Was Studied	83
How Literature Was Studied	95
Taste, Belles Lettres, and the Sublime	106
Coleridge, Emerson, and the Legacies of Moral Philosophy	109
4. Lost Episodes from Public Literary Culture	119
The St. Louis Movement and the Concord School	120
Dueling Bards	128
The Browning Society in the United States	136
A Library of American Literature	148
5. Literary Species and Academic Toolkits	161
Clash of the Titans: Novels versus Poetry	165
Crafting Conflicts	179
6. Disciplinarity and Beyond	193
Literature as Disciplinary	195
Literature as Interdisciplinary	205
Literature as Antidisciplinary	210
Coda	217
Notes	225
Index	313