

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
PART 1. BECKETT THE POET
I. Cartesian Beginnings	3
The Biographical Poem and the Problem of Allusion	3
The Basis in Reality	12
The Part of the Poet	33
The Illusion and Its Destruction; The Reality and Its Expression	46
II. Echo's Bones	67
Beckett and the Literary Heritage: Affinities and Metamorphoses	68
1. Ovid	68
2. Rimbaud	72
3. Schopenhauer and Habbakuk	73
4. The Tradition of the Troubadours	78
5. Dante, Goethe, and the Poems on Poetry	98
6. Religion and the Bible; Love and Dying	116
The Real Landscape and the Poet's Vision	124
The Personal Sources and the Unity of Echo's Bones	153
III. Two Poems	170
IV. Poems in French, 1937-1939	183
Contacts with the Macrocosm	183
1. Love: The Experience of Sameness	183
2. Love: The Theme of "Too Late"	186
3. Love: The Related Theme of "Too Young"	188
4. Vanitas vanitatum et omnis vanitas	192
5. Further Perspectives on the Macrocosm	195
Between Two Worlds	200
1. In an Alien Land	200
2. A Rueful Defense of Solitude	202
3. The Divided Self	203

CONTENTS

Life in the Microcosm	207
1. Tempus edax rerum	207
2. Death in Life	211
3. Und dann der Steg	214
V. Poems in French, 1946-1948	221
Continuity: The Two Worlds, Love and Death, Suffering, and Time	224
Between Past and Future: A Transitional Poem	230
The Part of Innovation: Life in the Microcosm, A Defense of Solitude	234
Beckett on Life and Art	247
PART 2. THE EARLY FICTION AND CRITICISM: APPRENTICESHIP AND VISION
	251
VI. Fictional Elaboration of Some Early Poems: The Belacqua Prose and Echo's Bones	254
VII. The Jettisoned Poems	272
Love and the Rational Mind	274
Above Poetry and Beneath It	296
Eros and the Need for Liberating Experience	301
Anteros and the Trap of Love	307
VIII. Early Prose and Poetry: General Themes	315
Four Motifs Related to the Microcosm: Absence, Silence, Time, Space	315
Representations of the Microcosm in the Early Prose	322
The Artist of the Microcosm and His Art	328
1. Wordplay and Intellectualism	328
2. Between the Intellectual and the Organic	333
3. Anti-intellectualism and the Artistic Imagination	339
IX. Watt and the Last Poems	348
The Biographical Setting and Its Relation to the Novel	348
A Novel of the Middle Years of Man	350
The Renunciations of Watt	352

CONTENTS

The Utopia of Mr. Knott's House	357
The Religious Dimension	364
The Fly in the Ointment of Microcosmos	369
Watt as Artist and Art in Watt	373
The Art of Watt and the Novels to Come	384
Two Poems and a Project	397
X. The Critical and Theoretical Writings	401
Beckett on Joyce and Proust	401
1. Macrocosm and Microcosm	404
2. Time and Habit	405
3. The Intellect and All Its Poms	405
4. The Miracle of Involuntary Memory	408
Beckett as Literary Journalist and Social Critic	414
The Aesthetics of Samuel Beckett	424
1. Some Consequences of Philosophical Dualism	424
2. Implications for Art	426
3. The Place of Criticism	436
Index	443