

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Introduction: Unforeseen Histories	9
1. 1989, Photography and History, Representation	29
End of (Certain) Histories	29
Manifold Ends of History: Philosophy, Politics and Culture	35
Photography and History—Four Patterns	43
Questioning Representation: Art and History	51
2. The Revolution as a Technical Disturbance	55
Televised Event—the New Image of the Revolutionary Masses	55
Opposition and Identity	64
“We are Victorious, the Television is with us”	76
Revolution as a Return—1989 versus 1917	85
3. Chaosmos: Montage as Spatial History	99
Zofia Kulik: Performative Archivist and Spatial Historian	99
From Ornamental Structure to Self-representation	124
Cyclical versus Linear Time—Gothic Window	140
Photography, Archive, History	152
4. Future Pasts of a Community	157
Return of Nightmares	158
Reality and Fiction	167
Wherever I Am	178
Re-enactment and Utopian Community	181
Bartana’s Nostalgic Projection	191

5. Painting History Photographically	201
Between Photography and Painting	201
Nationalism and Painting	203
Private versus Public History	213
Coda: Dierk Schmidt's History in the Present	232
Afterword—History on an Endless Trial	241
Notes	247
Bibliography	263