

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
1 Introduction	1
1.0 The Aim of the Book	1
1.1 Defining Key Terms	1
1.2 The Importance of Written CF for L2 Development	3
1.3 The Structure and Focus of Chapters 2–6	5
2 The Cognitive Perspective on Written CF for L2 Development	10
2.0 Introduction	10
2.1 The Relationship Between the Central Goal of L2 Learning and Two Types of Linguistic Competence and Knowledge	11
2.2 Skill Acquisition Theories and the Conversion of Explicit Knowledge to Implicit Knowledge	13
2.3 Two Types of Input: Positive Evidence and Negative Evidence (Including Written CF)	16
2.4 Stages in the Cognitive Processing of Input/CF for the Development of Explicit and Implicit Knowledge	18
2.5 Beyond the Single Written CF Episode – Knowledge Consolidation	25
2.6 The Potentially Mediating Influence of Individual and Contextual Factors on Cognitive Processing	25
2.7 Summary	33
3 Cognitively Informed Research on Written CF for L2 Development	34
3.0 Introduction	34
3.1 Can Written CF Facilitate L2 Development?	36
3.2 Are Some Types of Written CF More Facilitative of L2 Development than Others?	44

3.3	Is Written CF More Effective in Targeting Certain Linguistic Error Domains/Categories?	52
3.4	The Relative Effectiveness of Focused and Unfocused Written CF	57
3.5	The Moderating Effect of Individual and Contextual Factors	60
3.6	Concluding Remarks	64
4	The Sociocultural Perspective on Written CF for L2 Development	67
4.0	Introduction	67
4.1	Sociocultural Theory of Mind (SCT): An Overview	68
4.2	Key Constructs in SCT	70
4.3	Summary and Conclusions	86
5	Socioculturally Informed Research on Written CF for L2 Development	87
5.0	Introduction	87
5.1	Feedback as a Form of Scaffolding within the ZPD	88
5.2	Mediation and Use of Tools in the Provision and Processing of Written CF	97
5.3	Activity Theory: Feedback as an Activity	108
5.4	Concluding Remarks	118
6	Conclusion	120
6.0	Introduction	120
6.1	A Summary of Theoretical Perspectives and Empirical Findings on Written CF	121
6.2	Future Directions	128
6.3	Final Reflections	135
	References	137
	Index	149