

Contents

List of contributors	viii
1 Human rights and future people: an introduction	1
GERHARD BOS AND MARCUS DÜWELL
PART I
Obstacles and promises in contemporary human rights law	9
2 Greening human rights law: a focus on the European Convention on Human Rights	11
ELINA PIRJATANNIEMI
3 An atmospheric trust to protect the environment for future generations? Reform options for human rights law	25
PETER LAWRENCE
4 Avoiding the tragedy of human rights: how complex thought may open the way to recognising human rights for future generations	40
EMILIE GAILLARD
5 International human rights and duties to future generations: the role of an international constitution	53
STEPHEN RILEY

PART II

Long-term responsibility and the theory of human rights 67

6 Human dignity and intergenerational human rights 69

MARCUS DUWELL

7 Human rights and threats concerning future people: a sufficientarian proposal 82

JOS PHILIPS

8 Human rights, climate change, and sustainability 95

ADINA PREDA

9 A chain of status: long-term responsibility in the context of human rights 107

GERHARD BOS

PART III

Human rights approaches to sustainability 121

10 Human rights as a normative guideline for climate policy 123

MICHAEL REDER AND LUKAS KÖHLER

11 The duties we have to future generations: a Gewirthian approach 137

DERYCK BEYLEVELD

12 Ecological rights of future generations: a capability approach 151

RUTGER CLAASSEN

PART IV

Implications and implementation 167

13 On current food consumption and future generations: is there a moral need to change our food consumption in order to safeguard the human rights of future generations? 169

FRANCK L.B. MEIJBOOM

14 Climate change and the right to one child 181

TIM MEIJERS

15	The institutional representation of future generations	195
	SANDOR FULOP
16	Human rights, sustainability and future people – a future discussion	212
	MARCUS DÜWELL AND GERHARD BOS
	Index	219