

Dirk/Sinnewe

Divided to the Vein?

Derek Walcott's Drama
and the Formation of Cultural Identities

Königshausen & Neumann

Contents

Chapter 1 – Introduction	7
1.1 Criticism: Hamner, King, Stone and Thieme	10
1.2 Feminist Criticism.....	20
1.3 Post-colonial Criticism	21
Chapter 2 – Walcott and Bakhtinian Terminology	28
2.1 Bakhtin and Post-Colonialisms: Hybridity	28
2.2 M.M. Bakhtin’s The Dialogic Imagination	31
2.3 Bakhtin and the Phenomenon of Language	35
2.4 Bakhtin and Dramatic Dialogue	37
2.5 Bakhtin and Hybridization	38
Chapter 3 – Dream on Monkey Mountain	41
3.1 “Let us hear English!” – The Authoritative Discourse of Power	41
3.2 Linguistic Manifestations of the Racial Hierarchy	44
3.3 Makak’s Dream and Racial Hierarchy	45
3.4 Makak’s Quest for an Identity of His Own	47
3.5 The Spiritual and Material Aspects of Identity.....	49
3.6 Identity and Exploitation.....	53
3.7 A Dream Come True?.....	54
3.8 The Trial of the Tribes	55
3.9 Makak Going Home.....	58
Chapter 4 – Pantomime	61
4.1 The Crusoe Myth – Language, Ideology and Power	62
4.2 Setting the Stage	64
4.3 Cannibalism versus the Torch of Civilization	65
4.4 The Pre-Colonial Parrot: Mimicry versus Creativity.....	69
4.5 The Social-Economic Framework	72
4.6 Man Fridays	73
4.7 Power, Language and Identity	74
4.8 Classical or Creole?: Al Jolson and Other Roles.....	83

Chapter 5 – A Branch of the Blue Nile	89
5.1 The Vernacular in its Traditional Place	90
5.2 Shakespeare and Jim Crow: Language and Racial Stereotyping	91
5.3 Chris’s Yard Plays and the Classical Theater: A Hierarchy Revisited	94
5.4 Enter Hybridity? – Creolizing Shakespeare	100
5.5 Sheila’s Calling: The Universality of Art and its Relation To Racial Identity	102
5.6 Africa in Trinidad	105
5.7 Sheila’s Return to the Stage: Hybridity and The Economics of Race	107
5.8 Phil: A Minor Character	108
 Conclusion – Beyond Dualism: The Vernacular and the Formation of Caribbean Identities	 113
 Selected Bibliography.....	 132